Brown says anticrime package should make state more secure place to live

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. is supporting an eight-point anticrime package which he says is designed to help make California a "more secure" place to live.

The Democratic governor outlined the eight proposals in a speech Wednesday at a meeting of the California District Attorneys Association on the victims of violent crimes.

All the proposals are already bills or on the drawing board.

Perhaps Brown's newest revelation was his support for a redesign of the state probation subsidy program, which pumps $23 million to county probation departments each year.

That controversial program, which Gov. Ronald Reagan signed into law in 1965, was designed to lower commitments to state prisons and compensate counties for the cost of their local probation programs.

Brown said the program's formula must be changed to strip the monetary incentive for "local jurisdictions to put violent offenders back on the streets."

Asked if more people would be sent to state prison under his proposal, Brown said that "might be the effect."

Here, in brief, are Brown's other proposals, besides the probation subsidy proposal and a call for a mandatory prison term for a state prison parolee who commits a violent felony:

—Support a bill eliminating post-conviction bail for convicted felons who are going to be sent to state prison.

—Win support of pending legislation which toughens the state's new fixed-term sentencing law.

—Increase the ability of state personnel to help district attorneys investigate organized crime and white collar crime. Brown said state law blocks effective coordination now.

—Allow only one motion to suppress evidence in a trial.

—Eliminate continuances in trials as much as possible.

—Encourage judges to require defendants to make "direct restitution" to victims of crimes when "somebody hurts somebody."

Blame Carter Administration

Demo leaders charge 'budget wrecking'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic leaders laid heavy blame on President Carter's administration, especially Defense Secretary Harold Brown, today for the wrecking of a proposed budget that now must be replaced.

Early today after a grueling session, the House defeated, 320 to 84, the non-binding fiscal blueprint for the year beginning Oct. 1. The Budget Committee now is trying to have a new one ready for consideration next week.

A major factor was a liberal revolt against the addition of $2.3 billion for the Defense Department.

"It is unfortunate the Secretary of Defense made an endaround play," Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill told reporters. The play, he said, was for Brown to go directly to Rep. Omar Burleson, D-Tex., and ask for introduction of the amendment to increase the Pentagon funds.

"The Secretary just didn't understand the procedures," O'Neill said. O'Neill said Carter had telephoned him, and that he had advised the President to let the House settle the matter.

"This is the United States Congress where the Democratic majority is going to write the legislation," Budget Committee Chairman Robert N. Giaimo, D-Conn., said at a news conference. "It is not the Georgia legislature ...

"You don't just call from downtown and send word from the Secretary of Defense to the Armed Services Committee members and others and just say 'write a budget resolution'."

Giaimo said Republicans who had no intention of supporting the budget resolution voted for amendments such as the one increasing military funds.

"The administration, the Republicans and the Armed Services Committee took control and wrote the resolution, not realizing they destroyed the chances of passing the legislation," he said.

Giaimo called a committee meeting for Friday. He said the group will work out a resolution acceptable to the Democratic majority, including a compromise figure on defense.

O'Neill said he hoped a new resolution would be ready for House debate next week.

The defeated proposal attracted bipartisan opposition from both liberals and conservatives.

Liberals were restless because the spending blueprint for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1 was stripped of provisions for $50 tax rebates and other payments to most Americans but not of tax incentives for business. Carter had wanted both provisions removed from the resolution.

Liberals also turned on the plan after restoration of $2.3 billion for the Defense Department, reportedly at Carter's behest.

Rep. David R. Obey, D-Wis., a member of the Budget Committee, urged defeat of the resolution. He complained that funds for social programs had been slashed by as much as 30 per cent, while Pentagon funds were being increased.

Apparently referring to reports on the floor that Carter had interceded privately with O'Neill for restoration of the defense funds, Obey said he knew Giaimo had been to the White House several times and had not been told of the President's concern.

Rep. Parren J. Mitchell, DMd., said, "We have seen the utter and complete perversion and bastardization of the budget process."

Mitchell, an opponent of the defense increase, tried unsuccessfully to transfer an additional $6.5 billion from defense spending to domestic, energy and social programs.

Giaimo also tried futilely to block the defense increase, saying it was unfair to hold other programs down while saying that "not one dollar may be touched" of the big defense budget.

Conservatives joined the vote against the resolution in part because it called for a greatly enlarged budget deficit for the fiscal year, $68.6 billion, compared with Carter's figure of $57.9 billion.

The defeated spending blueprint called for revenues of $398.1 billion and spending of $466.7 billion.

Kaiser given until May 6 to satisfy emission laws or face blacklisting

By JON MORRIS
PB Staff Writer

Federal officials Wednesday notified Kaiser Steel Corp. in Fontana that it has until May 6 to satisfy air pollution control requirements or the firm will be "blacklisted" for federal contracts.

The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), by setting a May 6 deadline, actually extended the period of time it was giving Kaiser to give "ironclad" assurances that it will comply with emission laws at the giant steel mill.

Monday was the original deadline for a federal decision on blacklisting.

Notification of the new deadline came in the form of a letter and telegram from Rebecca Hamner, director of the EPA office of federal activities, to William R. Roesch, president of Kaiser Industries.

The Hamner message said Kaiser already qualifies for the blacklisting.

Kaiser officials say if the firm is blacklisted, it would not be eligible for federal contracts and would have to shut down its mill.

"It would be a disaster," Joseph Clark, a spokesmn for Kaiser, said this morning. Clark confirmed the company had received the Hamner telegram but said, "We are optimistic that we can work out a mutually satisfactory arrangement."

He declined to discuss present negotiations between Kaiser and air quality officials "until we have some kind of agreement."

The Hamner message noted that federal officials had determined "that there exists adequate evidence of continuing and recurring violations of clean air standards at the Fontana facility which is sufficient to satisfy the test for listing a facility on the EPA list for violations . . ."

Clark said he was hoping Kaiser could meet with the state Air Resources Board (ARB) this week to begin working out an agreement.

Some sources indicate Kaiser has asked the ARB to drop charges based on alleged false statements filed by the firm last July. The company also asked that a 523-count criminal misdemeanor charge for air pollution violations filed by the San Bernardino County district attorney's office be dropped.

The ARB has rejected the proposals, however, and said criminal matters are separate from the blacklisting issue.

2 men wounded in Ontario gun battle

By TONY AULT

Two men were wounded Wednesday night in an apparent gun battle outside the El Campos Bar at 1153 W. Holt Blvd., Ontario, police said.

Investigators said Augustine Valadez, 34, of Montclair, the co-owner of the bar, was found wounded on the west side of the building about 9 p.m. Officers said he was taken to Ontario Community Hospital for treatment.

Montclair police said they were notified Wednesday about 9 p. m. that Paul Palacios, 30, of Ontario, was taken to the Doctors Hospital in Montclair for treatment of gunshot wounds.

Doctors reportedly removed two bullets from the patient, officers said. He was listed in critical condition today.

A preliminary investigation revealed the two shootings were related, said officers. Police believe there was a gun battle between Valadez, Palacios and possibly several other persons outside the Ontario bar.

Officers said Palacios was taken to the Montclair hospital by several other persons sought for questioning.

Both victims were somewhat uncooperative in explaining details of the shooting, investigators said.

Officers said Valadez related that he had stepped outside the bar at the request of a woman patron. He said that for some reason, another man began shooting at him. Valadez told police he drew a small handgun he carried and shot back in self defense.

Police said Palacios told them he was walking down Holt Boulevard when, for no apparent reason, he was shot.

Investigators said they found a jammed .32-caliber handgun near the wounded Valadez outside the bar and four expended .12-gauge shotgun shells.

Bar patrons told police they heard what sounded like five shots from a small caliber weapon and two blasts, possibly from a shotgun.

Police today continued their investigation in the exact cause of the shootings. But they reported having difficulty as the victims and witnesses speak little English. Interpreters were called to assist officers.

Gunman gets $30,000 in gems, cash

By JACK BURSON
PB Staff Writer

A man and his wife were robbed of approximately $30,000 in jewelry and cash in their small jewelry store in Rowland Heights Wednesday morning, sheriff's deputies said.

The victims were Henry and Yvonne Tetreault, owners of Tetreault Jewelers at 18347 Colima Road.

The couple told deputies that a man entered at 10:30, drew a short-barreled revolver and forced them to open the safe. Then he took them to the rear of the store where he tied Mrs. Tetreault's hands with electrician's tape and left her there.

He returned to the front of the store where he removed pieces of jewelry and cash from the safe and jewelry from display cases before fleeing.

The loot consisted of men and women's diamond rings, watches and gold pendants, and $800 in cash.

The robber was described as a Latin, about 25 years old, 5 feet 6 weighing 150 pounds, Det. Sgt. R.S. Halliday said.

Army to recruit more women?

WASHINGTON (AP) — The quality of recruits entering the Army during the past three months fell to the lowest level in at least a year, and if the trend continues it could lead to recruitment of more women.

A high school diploma is a main standard of quality for the armed services. But figures obtained from Pentagon manpower officials show that only 47 per cent of the Army's recruits in January through March were high school graduates.

This is about 9 per cent below the Army's minimum objective and well under levels reported by the Marines, Navy and Air Force.

The continued downward trend in the Army's recruit quality seems likely to fuel a debate over continuation of the all-volunteer concept.

Some Congress members, including Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, contend the draft should be restored. Defense Secretary Harold Brown disagrees.

Army officials, who blame recruitment problems partly on congressional cutbacks in funds, could turn to the acceptance of more women as a way of bolstering quality.

Sources said about 90 per cent of the women recruited into the Army have high school diplomas, which the Army has said "is the best measure of quality as it relates to motivation, discipline and probability to complete the full term of enlistment."

Efforts to cap oil well fail

STAVANGER, Norway (AP) — American-led troubleshooters trying to save the North Sea from further massive pollution failed in three attempts today to choke off the runaway Bravo offshore oil well.

Officials of the Phillips Petroleum Co., the well's owner, said they did not know when or how the "blowout" specialists would try again to cap the gushing well.

"It's a setback, and any setback is serious," Robert Archambeault, Phillips director of engineering for the midsea Ekofisk oil field, said at a news conference. "It certainly doesn't leave the situation without a possibility for recovery."

Norwegian officials said 6½ million gallons of crude oil had spilled into the North Sea since the well blew out last Friday.

Archambeault said that a "blowout preventer" had mistakenly been placed upside down on the wellhead before last week's accident.

"It's a good possibility that the well could have been sealed if the blowout preventer had not been installed in an inverted position sometime last week," he said.

Phillips officials also said the half moon-shaped steel discs called "blind rams" that were used today to try to close off the well had been tested to withstand only 4,000 pounds per square inch of pressure, but that the force of the oil spurting to the surface from the seabed was estimated at 4,350 pounds of pressure per square inch.

Solar energy costs may be competitive in five years, according to energy chief

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Solar energy costs may be competitive with other means of producing electricity within five years, the new chief of the Federal Energy Administration says.

"If you get these more advanced technologies of direct conversion of sunlight to electricity, it means that the energy restraints are off your backs forever," Federal Energy Administrator John O'Leary told guests at the American Newspapers Publishers Association convention Wednesday.

O'Leary also said President Carter's energy plan has received a "very, very positive" response, although different interest groups have opposed specific portions.

"The petroleum people are somewhat miffed over their treatment," O'Leary said. "Some of the environmental people don't like the coals aspects, or the nuclear guidelines. Some of the consumer people would prefer to see no excise taxes.

"But, by and large, these are not attacks on the central objective of the program ... (to) share the burden more or less equally across the economy," O'Leary said at a news conference following his ANPA speech.

In his speech before 1,400 publishers and editors, O'Leary said as recently as two years ago he believed the technology to efficiently produce electricity from sunlight was 25 years in the future.

But since then, the increasing cost and impending shortage of other energy sources has spurred research to the extent that he now expects practical results from solar energy technology within five years, O'Leary said.

Current solar energy technology costs 10 to 15 times the cost of other sources to produce electricity, "but we can close that gap entirely within five years," he said.

He predicted "enormous opposition" to the President's plan to develop more coal and nuclear resources, but said they are needed.

Rose Bird airs another policy change

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — For the first time, justices on the California Supreme Court will be joined by a superior court judge, as part of a recent policy change by Chief Justice Rose Bird.

Santa Clara County Superior Court Judge Homer Thompson will join six other justices in hearing oral arguments May 2 and 4.

Three weeks ago Chief Justice Bird, without fanfare, made another policy change providing that judges who are defeated at the polls and retire before their term ends will not be assigned to sit on any state court.

Steve Buehl, executive assistant to the Chief Justice, said Thompson's assignment is part of a program to encourage judges and justices to "gain firsthand knowledge of other levels of the court system."

Thompson, 56, appointed by Gov. Edmund Brown Sr. in 1961, will be sitting in place of Justice Marshall McComb, the 82-year-old justice suspended pending a decision by a special tribunal on whether he should be retired or removed.

Firing of teachers, subs

SACRAMENTO (AP) — School administrators and teachers are in a legislative conflict over the power of schools to fire probationary teachers and substitutes.

The two interests clashed Wednesday before the Senate Education Committee at a hearing on bills by Sen. Peter Behr, R-Tiburon.

The major bill would allow a board to fire a teacher without a hearing, after one year of employment.

Behr said the present process of a complaint, hearing and possible court appeal is so cumbersome that it is rarely used, "regardless of that teacher's competence."

School board officials and administrators, endorsing the bill, said they often can't predict a teacher's quality from interviews and recommendations, and removing an incompetent teacher is difficult, time-consuming and divisive.

But on the other side, teacher groups said hearings are needed to protect their rights, and don't impede dismissal of incompetents.

Mary Bergen of the California Federation of Teachers added, "Incompetence really is not usually the issue.... The issue usually is a person who rocked the boat."

Facing deportation

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A man accused of being a former Nazi and murdering thousands of Serbs, Jews and gypsies may be deported, despite his claims that he will face political persecution by the Communist rulers of Yugoslavia, it was reported Wednesday.

Andrija Artukovic, 76, of Seal Beach, Calif., has been told by the Immigration and Naturalization Service that he has 30 days to justify his continued stay in the country, two Los Angeles newspapers reported in its Thursday morning editions.

Artukovic has stopped moves to deport him for more than 20 years by arguing that Section 243H of the Immigration and Nationality Act says deportation may be withheld if a person would be subject to persecution for racial, religious or political reasons.

However, INS officials said that those grounds could not be used by persons suspected of having committed war crimes, the newspaper reported.

Hospital staffer arrested

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A psychiatric technician at Norwalk's Metropolitan State Hospital has been arrested on charges of hitting a patient who died late that day.

Arrested Wednesday on charges of misdemeanor battery was Barry Trevena, 33, who allegedly struck 19-year-old Mark Franklin Holcomb while the youth was lay in bed under Holcomb's supervision on June 23, 1976.

Authorities said that Holcomb, of Garen Grove, died later that day after choking on his own vomit.

On Sept. 15, a coroner's jury found that Holcomb "died at the hands of another other than by accident." A pathologist testified at the coroner's inquest that a blow to the forehead could have triggered the youth's vomiting.

Deputy Dist. Atty. Tamia Hope said no murder charges were filed "because there was insufficient evidence to prove the blow was the cause of Holcomb's death."

Travena was arrested at his mother's Hollywood home. He is on a paid administrative leave from the hospital, where he has worked since July 1975.

Bradley talks to Carter

LOS ANGELES (AP) — President Carter has agreed that Southern California should not be penalized because its environmental policies conflict wih new national energy goals, Mayor Tom Bradley says.

The mayor met with Carter Tuesday in Washington for 25 minutes to discuss subjects ranging from energy to unemployment to the drought.

The President agreed it would be unfair to penalize the area for using a cleaner burning fuel instead of coal, said Bradley.

Carter is proposing that the industries switch to using coal to cut down on the amount of fossil fuel the nation must import. California requires that utilities use cleaner burning fuel to reduce air pollution.

"The President agreed it would be inequitable to penalize us for using cleaner burning fuel...we simply could not convert," Bradley said.

Bradley said Carter had no intention of penalizing any community that was "doing its bit" to fight air pollution.

Homeowners get priority

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Would-be homeowners will get priority over speculators if money gets tight as a result of higher interest rates charged to lenders by the federal government, the chairman of American Savings & Loan Association says.

"We're going to take care of the homeowners first," Mark Taper said Tuesday after the annual meeting of First Charter Financial Corp. of Beverly Hills, the parent company of Amerian Savings.

Taper's comments came after the Federal Home Loan Bank in San Francisco announced that it was raising the interest it charges to savings and loans by one per cent. One-year loans would carry 7½ per cent interest, and one-to-fiveyear loans 8½ per cent.

Maurice Mann, president of the bank, said the action was taken to slow down the frantic pace of lending in the three-state area supervised by the federal bank — California, Nevada and Arizona.

"I think the bank's action will discourage speculative loans," Taper said. "It will dampen speculative buying because we won't have the funds for them."

However, J.K. Baillie, chairman and chief executive of Los Angeles Federal Savings & Loan, said he felt the federal bank's action was the wrong way to achieve its objective.

"In order to lower the price of anything, you try to increase the supply," Baillie said. "In order to increase th supply of housing, we need funds to finance new construction. So the Federal Home Loan Bank of San Francisco should be lowering its rate, not raising it."

Drought and the economy

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Farmers will be squeezed by the drought but the rest of the economy will make up for any dent the dry weather will put in state revenues, state Finance Director Roy Bell says.

On Wednesday, Bell said it's too early to predict the economic impact of the drought on the state budget. But he said it will be offset by gains in employment, increased business, and higher tax revenues from inflation.

"Those people who are hurt are really going to get hurt," said Gov. Edmund Brown Jr.'s top financial aide. "The loss in farm income will have an impact in the 1977-78 fiscal year.

"But we think the economy is buoyant enough to offset it. Department stores are doing pretty well, and the work force is doing a little better than we expected."

Bell predicted the department's next economic forecast, due in mid-May, would estimate a budget surplus equal to or higher than its previous prediction of $890 million for this fiscal year and nearly $1.5 billion for the year ending June 30, 1978.

Bell also said it will take another three weeks to evaluate a Department of Water Resources prediction that the drought would cost farmers $1 billion, a lower figure than farm groups have used.

Espionage trial goes to jury today

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Christopher Boyce has testified at his espionage trial that he became involved in spying because of his concern over alleged CIA manipulation of Australian labor.

Boyce, 23, is accused of conspiring to sell secret codes and plans through a boyhood friend to Soviet agents in Mexico City.

Boyce's lawyers have rested their case, and the jury is to receive instructions from the judge today.

The trial of co-defendant Andrew Daulton Lee was to begin after the Boyce jury begins deliberations.

Testifying in his own defense Wednesday, Boyce said he became disenchanted with the Central Intelligence Agency in 1974 after discovering top-secret documents at TRW Systems Inc. He said the documents indicated that the CIA was working to suppress strikes, particularly in the transportation industry, in Australia.

At the time, Boyce was a documents clerk at TRW in suburban Redondo Beach

He said Lee had been complaining to him about U.S. politics at a party in suburban Palos Verdes where they both lived.

"I told him 'If you think that's bad you should see what they're doing to the Australians,'" Boyce testified earlier.

He said he asked Lee to help him expose the CIA's interference in Australian affairs and Lee asked him to write it all down, which he did. Boyce claims Lee gave the letter to the Russians and it was then used to blackmail him into becoming a spy.

Boyce, concluding two days of testimony, admitted that sometimes the life of a spy was exciting.

"But it was also very frightening. It was a thing I never enjoyed," Boyce said.

Boyce insisted that Lee had threatened to kill him several times if he didn't go along with the spy plans. He said he believed Lee because "when I was in high school with him he took his pistol and shot his pet cat in the head ... he said he didn't want it anymore. I told him he was a litte weird."

He said that after he met with the Soviet agents, they wanted him to study Russian history and politics to prepare himself for a job at the U.S. State Department where he would be a spy.

114 jet crash victims buried in Westminster

WESTMINSTER (AP) — Only a month after they took off on a dream vacation to the Mediterranean, 114 unidentified persons who died in history's worst air disaster have been buried in numbered graves.

Seventy-five of the 114 were Southern Californians.

A total of 580 persons were killed when two 747 jetliners — one chartered by Pan American World Airways and the other a Dutch KLM plane — collided on a fog-shrouded runway at Santa Cruz de Tenerife airport in the Canary Islands on March 27.

"Just a few short days ago, you were saying goodby to these people who were going away on a happy holiday," said Msgr. John Sammon of the Roman Catholic diocese of Orange County.

"Now, you are saying goodbye for the final time."

Nearly 1,500 persons attended the interfaith memorial service Wednesday at a 75-foot by 75-foot gravesite donated by Westminster Memorial Park, about 30 miles southeast of Los Angeles. The individual graves were marked only with numbers, but will be marked later with a monument carrying all the victims' names when they are learned.

In addition to the 114 unidentified bodies, the remains of Perry and Monica Johnson of Santa Monica and George Berns of Redwood City were also buried.

Relatives requested that Berns and the Johnsons be buried here so they could be near loved ones who who died in the crash but whose bodies have not yet been identified.

More of the bodies may be identified following comparisons of medical records by a team working at Dover Air Force Base, Del.

Burning candle causes $20,000 blaze in H.H.

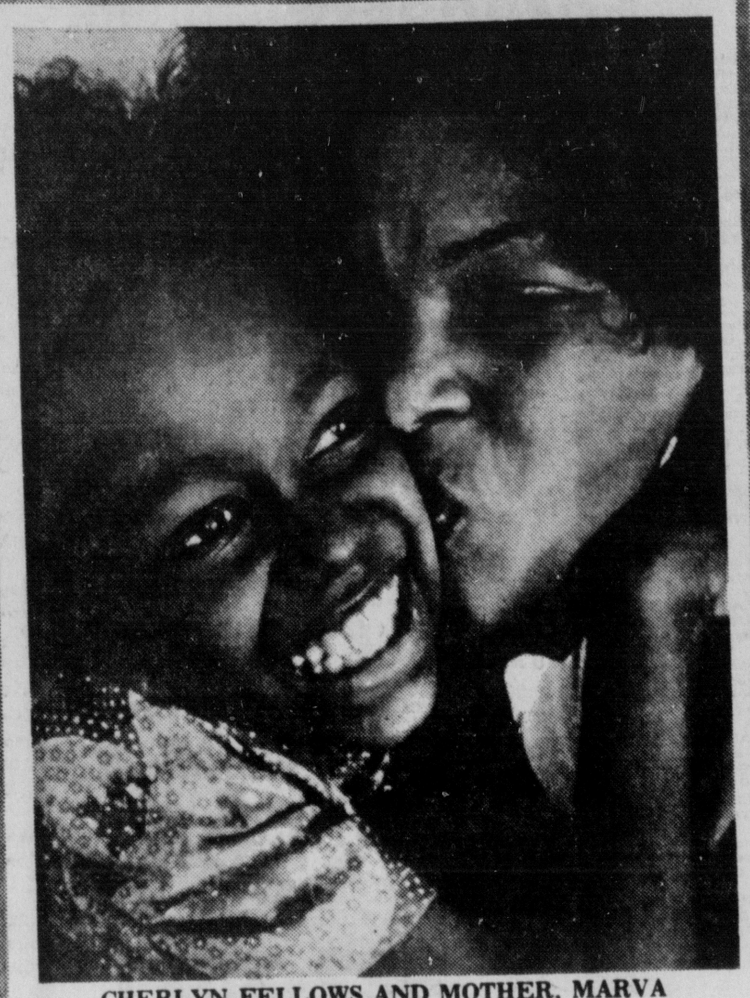

A burning candle caused a $20,000 fire and minor injuries to two people shortly before midnight Wednesday in Hacienda Heights.

Mrs. Nancy Isaacson suffered first degree burns of the face and her son Mark, 16, had second degree burns of the hands in the fire at the family home, 15445 Del Prado Drive, Hacienda Heights.

The fire started in an upstairs bedroom where a candle was burning, according to county fire officials.

Both victims were treated at the scene by firemen and released.

The damage was listed as $15,000 to the structure and $5,000 to contents.

CHERLYN FELLOWS AND MOTHER, MARVA

Girl, 9, survives rare cancer type, no one knows why

SEATTLE (AP) — She has big eyes, a quick smile — and a rare form of cancer in which the tumors contain identifiable body parts such as hair, teeth and eyes.

Cherlyn Fellows, 9, has mysteriously lived longer than doctors said she would. She is probably the world's only survivor of the rare cancer form, an embryonal teratoma of the ovary.

"I feel nobody has done this but God," says Marva Fellows, Cherlyn's mother.

"He guided the hand of the surgeon. A great weight has lifted. I look at the flowers of spring and I see hope."

Cherlyn has suffered from the disease for three years, when a lump was found in her abdomen. At the time she lived in Oakland, Calif.

Fifteen months ago, Dr. Robert Schaller — the Seattle surgeon who has performed six of her eight operations — released Cherlyn from Children's Orthopedic Hospital here.

He was convinced she had no chance of survival.

At the time, Schaller removed three tumors from Cherlyn's abdomen. Dr. Ron Chard, a chemotherapist, treated her with combinations of anti-cancer drugs.

Cherlyn lost her hair and had other side effects.

But all the drugs failed. The tumors grew again until her abdomen swelled to abnormal size.

Then she was treated for seven months with an experimental new drug, VM26, which had worked against cancer in animals, and the tumors stopped growing.

Doctors are not sure why. They say it could be the nature of the cancer that caused it to stop, or that the girl's body has developed ways to fight the disease, or that the drug worked.

'It is one of a kind. We just can't say," said Dr. Chard.

In February, four masses of tumors were removed, along with one kidney and her ovaries. One of the tumors measured 10½ inches in diameter.

The tumors contained tiny parts of hair, teeth, eyes and other identifiable body parts. "It's sort of like an aborted twin," Dr. Schaller said.

The tumors were different from earlier ones, which contained only immature, unformed tissue.

Cherlyn's problems aren't over. She has a blood clot, which once threatened to force amputation of a leg. A small tumor was left in her chest, but it's not growing.

Mrs. Fellows, a mother of six, now lives in Seattle. She has had trouble getting public assistance, and two of the other children are injured.

But, she said, things are looking up. She has a job, and last week it was determined she could get supplemental assistance.

And around Children's Orthopedic Hospital, they call Cherlyn the miracle girl.

Can't cite dog owners, judge rules

NEW YORK (AP) — A State Supreme Court justice has ruled that police cannot cite dog owners for allowing their pets to relieve themselves on city streets and in public parks.

Justice Bernard Nadel said in his Manhattan courtroom Wednesday that a suit asking for the citations was laudable, but that city law only applies to sidewalks, not in gutters and parks.

A group of 17 citizens had brought suit to demand action by the city police, sanitation and health departments and the Environmental Protection Administration and Bureau of Animal Control.

The petitioners also demanded that city agencies launch an educational campaign to inform dog owners of the law.

However, Justice Nadel ruled that, "It is not for the petitioners ... or for the courts to determine which problems are of such importance as to require educational campaigns."

He said that is something city officials "are granted descretion to determine."

A prediction:

Postal Service's decline

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of a commission that studied the future of the nation's mail service predicted today "the decline of the Postal Service as a delivery system."

Gaylord Freeman, chairman of the Commission on Postal Service, responded to congressional criticisms of the panel by saying, "I share your disappointment that we could not reach the conclusion that services should be expanded rather than reduced. But the evidence would not allow that conclusion.

"We contracted with four reputable firms, all possessing expertise in postal affairs or in the field of electronic communications. All predicted that the Postal Service in its present form simply cannot survive unless postal rates rise beyond a politically and publicly acceptable level or unless subsidies are greatly increased," he said.

In its report last week to Congress and President Carter, the commission proposed cutting mail delivery from six to five days per week while increasing subsidies. The recommendations have been criticized by a number of members of Congress.

Freeman told a House Post Office subcommittee that electronic means of transfering money and sending messages will take away a substantial part of mail volume in coming years.

He said continuing six-day delivery to 76 million addresses "is an extravagance.

"The facts are inescapable, and we believe that the public would prefer modest increases in rates and appropriations and five-day delivery to any extreme increase in appropriations or major curtailment of service at this time," he said.

Subcommittee Chairman James M. Hanley, D-N.Y., opened the hearing by renewing his criticism of the commission. "I frankly hoped that the commission would have spent more time trying to pursue ways service could be improved and rates held at a relatively reasonable level rather than to accept at face value the doomsday prophecies of the Postal Service's management."

Other criticism of the report has come from leaders of postal labor unions, who say that at least 20,000 jobs would be lost under the commission recommendations.

The commission was established by Congress last year to study the chronic financial problems of the mail agency.

Even with the cutback, the report forecasts, the cost of mailing a first-class letter will have to be increased to about 22 cents by 1985. As recently as 1971, the rate was 6 cents.

Without the measures it recommended, the commission said the first-class rate will have to be raised to about 28 cents by 1985.

Amin's troops in Zaire

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Ugandan President Idi Amin has sent troops to Zaire to help President Mobutu Sese Seko's military government deal with the rebels in southern Zaire, Uganda radio said today.

The radio, monitored here, said a "suicide strike battalion" of the Ugandan army left Entebbe Airport for Zaire earlier in the day.

The radio said the battalion was commanded by Col. Francis Kiwanuka and described it as "very tough."

The soldiers were accompanied on the flight to Kinshasa by Zaire's charge de affaires in Kampala, the radio said.

Amin visited Zaire last weekend for a day of talks with Mobutu and offered him military assistance in the war against Angola-based Katangan gendarmes who invaded Shaba, formerly Katanga Province, early last month.

Morocco's King Hassan earlier this month dispatched troops to assist Mobutu's beleaguered army. Since then the joint Zairean-Moroccan forces have managed to halt the advancing invasion force and recaptured several towns in Shaba from the Katangan rebels.

The radio did not say how many Ugandan troops had been sent to Zaire, but informed sources in Kampala said that at least 100 soldiers had been dispatched.

The U.S. Embassy says American construction workers will begin returning to southern Zaire this weekend following the Zaire army's advance against rebellious Lunda tribesmen.

The embassy said 8 to 11 Americans would return Sunday or Monday to resume work on a power line and converter the Morrison-Knudsen Co. of Boise, Idaho, is building in the Kolwezi copper district.

They were among 77 Americans evacuated from Kolwezi after the invasion in March of rebellious Lundas who had been exiles in neighboring Angola.

Driver faints; car crashes; two injured

Two persons were injured in Pomona Wednesday morning when a motorist apparently fainted and her car crashed at Lextington Street west of San Antonio Avenue, police reported.

The victims were the driver, Dolores P. Garcia, 36, and 5-year-old Arul Monza, both of Pomona. Both were released after treatment at Pomona Valley Community Hospital.

Police reported that after the driver fainted, her car crossing Lexington and struck a parked auto before coming to a stop against a utility pole.

Warning against making known funding for CIA

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former CIA Director Richard Helms says making the nation's over-all intelligence costs public would mean nothing to the American public. "It would fall in the dull thud department," he said.

But Helms and two of his successors, William Colby and George Bush, warned a Senate committee Wednesday that revealing the spending total would generate demands for further details that eventually could imperil U.S. intelligence operations seriously.

Despite the warning, Adm. Stansfield Turner, current CIA chief, said any risk in publication is warranted by a need to be more open with the American public.

The Senate intelligence committee, trying to decide how much the public should know about spending for espionage, arranged to hear today on the subject from a panel of three constitutional experts.

The panel held its meetings to decide on authorizing intelligence funds for the next fiscal year in closed sessions.

Now it faces a decision on whether to make any figures public or whether to maintain the traditional secrecy under which the money is hidden in military and other appropriations.

Colby told the panel it faced "a watershed decision."

"If you decide to make this total budget figure public, I confidently predict that you will be inundated by a series of questions in the coming years as to what the figure includes and what it excludes ... and I believe in a very short time we will be losing much of the value of the sums appropriated for these intelligence activities."

Bush expressed similar views in a written statement.

Helms said he once favored disclosure of the over-all budget. But he said he "tilted" the other way after deciding that "more and more information would be required to explain this figure or that figure."

Helms also warned that publication of a budget figure could be "enormously helpful" to foreign experts whose job is to figure out U.S. intelligence priorities, activities and capabilities.

The united front presented by the three ex-CIA chiefs contrasted with the Turner's views. Turner said President Carter ordered him, as head of the nation's intelligence community, not to oppose disclosure of an over-all figure.

Jury has Hite case; juror becomes ill in deliberations

By TONY AULT
PB Staff Writer

A West Valley Superior Court jury today continued to deliberate the fate of Gerrard Princeton Hite, accused of rape, burglary and murder.

The jury's inital deliberations Wednesday afternoon were interrupted when one of the jurors, Henry Wehnert, became ill and was taken to Doctors Hospital in Montclair.

Wehnert was still hospitalized today in fair condition, causing Judge Garner to dismiss Wehnert from the jury and seat an alternate juror so that deliberations could start again.

The jury members began deliberations Wednesday following final arguments, with instructions to attempt to determine the innocence or guilt of Hite who is accused of one count of murder, three counts of forcible rape, three counts of burglary, one count of sodomy and one count of false imprisonment.

Hite was initially arrested as a suspect in the burglary of the Chino apartment of Linda Larson, and then later for the alleged murder-rape of Norma Mae Stewart and the alleged rape of two other West End women.

Defense attorney Barry Plotkin told the jury he was "deeply disturbed" by the prosecutions allegation that somehow, Hite's father, Eugene Hite, had contrived alibis for his son by suggesting to the witnesses that something happened when in fact it had not. The prosecution showed the elder Hite's notes made during the course of his own investigation that could have been interpreted as the means of his contriving alibis for his son. "This is simply not true," said Plotkin.

While on the stand, the elder Hite denied the allegations, saying that he only meant to "jog his son's memory" and that all the responses from the witnesses he recorded on his notes were "volunteered."

Plotkin said that reasonable men perhaps could interpret the notes and testimony as a contrivance, thus he said he would caution the jury that the elder Hite's testimony should only be taken as part of the defense and not "taint" all the other parts.

He said that the testimony of two women Hite allegedly raped and as a result spent time in a state hospital prior to the current crimes in question, should be dismissed because there was not enough evidence presented in the trial to tie the defendant in with the current cases.

He said the jury should not overrate the eyewitness testimony of two of the victims, one who claimed Hite raped her, and Linda Larsen who claimed Hite broke into her apartment. He said, for instance, Mrs. Larson told Chino police she could not describe the man who broke into her home, but later said she was certain it was Hite whom she had once dated. He said the other woman, the Ontario housewife, only saw her attacker for a few seconds . . . hardly enough time to positively identify him.

Further, Plotkin said the evidence that comes from crime labs is usually "overemphasized" by the jury. He said more often than not such evidence is very unreliable because criminalists by the virtue of their occupation are prejudiced. "They are neophite scientists who wear badges and carry a gun," said Plotkin.

Plotkin pointed out that Carolyn Pons, a criminalist who testified about rape tests performed on two of the victims, on one hand said certain seminal fluid samples taken from rape-murder victim Norma Stewart were uncompatable to the defendants, while on the other hand she said they could be compatable or uncompatable. He said an expert witness from a pathologists lab he called to the stand proved that the criminalist was not familiar with the latest rape test techniques, and placed other of her testing procedures in question.

He said the prosecution presented evidence that a pair of shoes found outside of Larson's apartment bore a foot impression similar to Hite's. But, Plotkin said the defense brought forth a shoe salesman who said a friend of Hite's exchanged a pair of shoes on July 21. The friend testified he had seen Hite purchase a pair of shoes similar to those found at the Larson apartment sometime in April or May.

Plotkin told the jury that the necklace found under Mrs. Stewart's body was commonly sold at numerous hobby shops and gift shop throughout California. He said prosecution witnesses testified that they had thought they had seen Hite with a similar necklace, but other witnesses said they had never seen Hite wear any jewelry.

Man with huge cache of arms surrenders

NEW BALTIMORE, Mich. (AP) — A man who officials say had enough explosives in his apartment here to level the 10-building complex where he lived has surrendered to federal officers in Miami, Fla.

The FBI said 31-year-old Gary Rogers was charged Wednesday under the Federal Firearms Act with illegal possession of firearms and will be returned to Detroit for trial.

FBI agents said they found an estimated 15,000 pounds of weapons and explosives including a cannon, mortar shells, booby traps, machine gun parts, hand grenades and blasting caps in Rogers' two-bedroom apartment. The cache was discovered on Tuesday.

Rogers' next door neighbor, Robert Munchausen, said, "I saw him carry stuff in and out but I heard he was a gunsmith and had a permit for everything."

A Miami FBI agent said Rogers isn't saying much: "He says he's an arms dealer — but he doesn't have a license."

The residents of the other 15 apartments in Rogers building were evacuated while Army ordnance experts removed part of the arsenal. Their work was to be completed today.

"There was so much stuff there that I wasn't even familiar with some of it. A lot of it looked like new ordnance," said Bob Powell, assistant special agent in charge of the Detroit office of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

When he surrendered, he was carrying a duffle bag containing "clothes and personal stuff and a couple boxes of small arms ammunition," according to the FBI in Miami.

The mortar rounds appeared to have come from an Army depot at Anniston, Ala., the FBI said. Army officers were taking inventory of the other items to try to find out their origin.

Rogers moved into the apartment in June 1975. The complex manager, Sherri Brinker, said she last saw him April 18 when he gave her notice he was moving out.

Mrs. Brinker said the cache was found Tuesday night after children who live in the complex found a sleeping bag containing gun parts and the FBI was alerted.

Agents said they then searched a basement storage area and found weapons in a compartment assigned to Rogers' apartment, the FBI said.

Pope, archbishop confer

A goal: uniting two churches

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. Donald Coggan, and Pope Paul VI discussed Christian unity for 1½ hours today in a meeting described by the Pope as "a joyful occasion."

Catholic sources, however, cautioned that the goal of uniting the Roman Catholic and Anglican churches and their 60 million followers was many years away.

"What a marvelous thing to meet and speak together for more than an hour in love, frankness and ease," Dr. Coggan said after the meeting. He announced that three Roman Catholic delegates would attend the next Anglican Synod at Canterbury in 1978.

In an exchange of gifts the archbishop gave the Pope a painting of Canterbury and received in return an 18th century painting of Christ and a facsimile of a 4th century gospel in Greek, the oldest at the Vatican.

Speaking in English, Pope Paul told the archbishop: "It is a particular joy for us to gather in this spirit with Your Grace and with other leaders of the Anglican Communion, which in the words of the Second Vatican Council has with us 'a special place.'.. We must not see such a celebration as mere nostalgia for the past, but rather as a spiritual reality."

The Pope also said the pace of Catholic-Anglican collaboration "has quickened marvelously in recent years."

The meeting between the 67-year-old spiritual leader of the world's 60 million Anglicans and the 79-year-old pontiff of the 600 million Roman Catholics was the third such since Archbishop Geoffrey Fisher and Pope John XXIII met in 1960.

It follows conclusion of an eight-year study by a joint Anglican-Roman Catholic International Commission which prepared three documents outlining many points of agreement as well as basic differences.

The key stumbling block to unity of the two churches is the Anglicans' refusal to recognize the infallibility of the pope, proclaimed in 1870, and their refusal to recognize his primacy over a unified church, the issue over which King Henry VIII founded the Church of England in 1534.

Other unresolved issues are mixed marriages and the ordination of women as priests by the U.S. Episcopal Church and the Anglican Church in Canada.

Vandals go on spree of tire slashing

Ontario police today continued their search for vandals who slashed more than 150 tires on cars and trucks parked in the downtown area of Ontario early Wednesday morning.

Police said that the tire slashings were reported by merchants and businessmen between 6 and 9 a.m. Wednesday as they were returning to work.

Police said approximately 150 tires were slashed on 100 different vehicles, many of them commercial trucks and that the damage to the tires would run into many thousands of dollars.

Police said residents who may have seen the vandals at work are urged to contact the police department at 986-6711.

Squirrel poisoning halted

SOLANA BEACH (AP)—A 118-unit condominium development that partially blamed squirrels for erosion of cliffs along the beach and hired an exterminator is doing an about face.

Bait stations containing chemicals that make squirrels bleed to death internally are being removed, according to Dave Stubbs, head of the Seascape Sur Homeowners Association.

He said residents of the development between Oceanside and San Diego became upset about the eradication program after the association authorized eradication of the animals.

The project is endangered by cliff erosion.

Covina mayor

Schabarum challenger?

Covina Mayor Elaine Donaldson says she is a candidate for the First District on the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors.

If she files papers, Mrs. Donaldson will challenge Peter F. Schabarum, the incumbent supervisor who has served the past seven years.

Mayor Donaldson says she seeks the office to overcome "the county's growing lack of responsiveness to local concerns."

ELAINE DONALDSON

As supervisor, Mrs. Donaldson says she would direct her energies toward restoring efficiency to the county governmental structure she believes has grown costly, cumbersome and out of touch with the public.

Mrs. Donaldson is Covina's first woman mayor. She was the city's first female representative on the City Council.

In private life, she is secretary-treasurer of Donkirk Tool Supply, Inc., of Duarte. She and her husband, Raymond, have three children.

Show on matter, energy slated

The Citrus College Planetarium presentation of "Matter and Energy" will be conducted May 5, 12, 19 and 26 and two others on June 2 and 9.

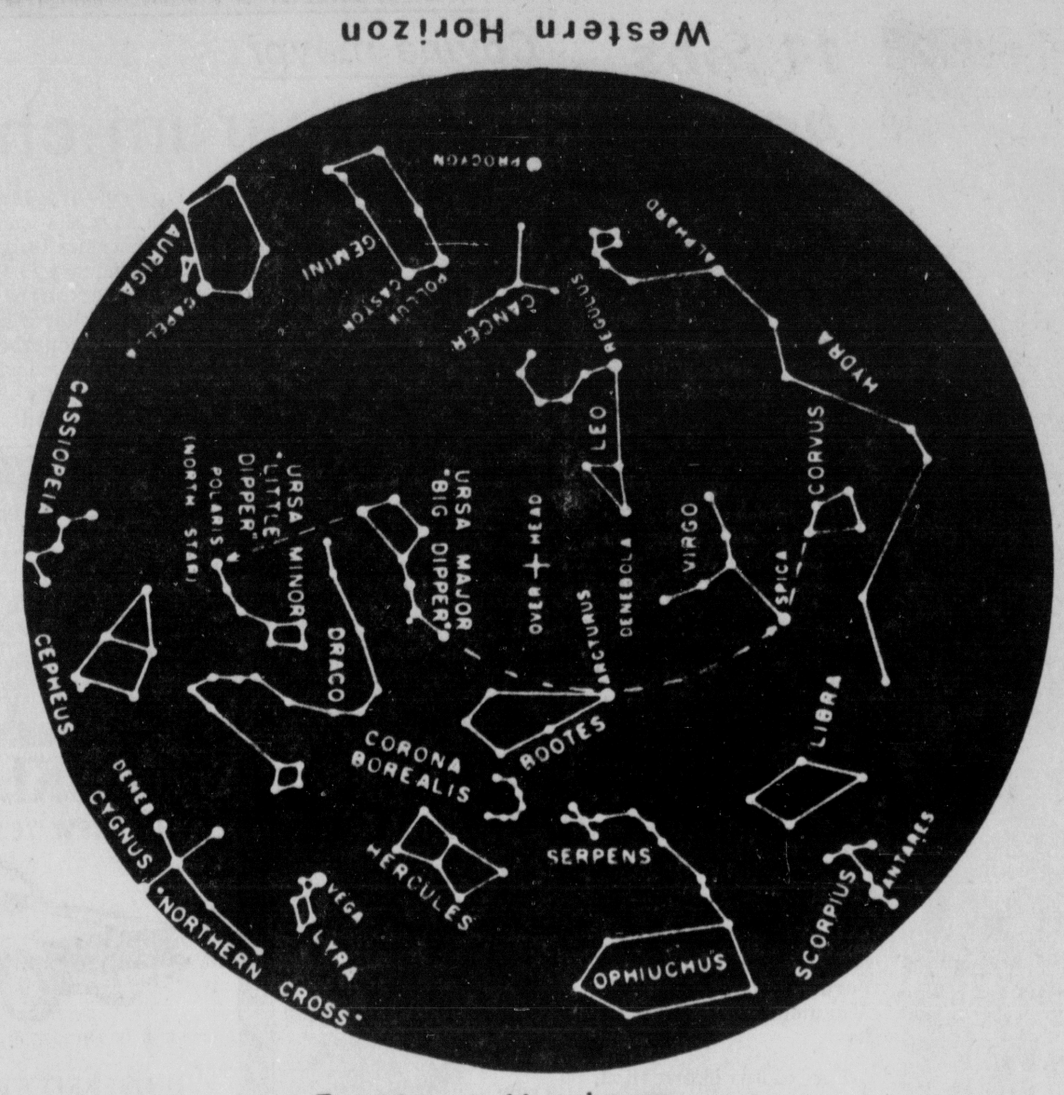

Each discussion-presentation will begin at 7 p.m. in the planetarium and will be supplemented with slides and a film.

The programs, free and open to the public, will be presented by Kent Miller, who teaches astronomy classes in the evening division at Citrus College. Miller is also a physics instructor at Claremont High School.

The discussion will relate studies showing the basic relationship between matter and energy, what matter and anti-matter is and how it exists in the universe.

Special instruments and lighting in the planetarium enable one to see how the stars in the universe would appear if they were not "drowned out" by the effects of city lights, smog and other weather conditions.

For additional information, persons may call 599-8339.

MAY SKY — An introduction to the night sky in May and a program on "Matter and Energy" will be presented free at the Citrus College Planetarium at 7 p.m. on May 5, 12, 19 and 26 and on June 2 and 9. Kent Miller will be the program director.

The pants story

The word pants is derived from a stock character of classic Italian comedy — "Pantalone." He wore a kind of leg covering that resembled our modern-day trousers. Later, in England, the Duke of Wellington gave the necessary impetus to the changeover from knee breeches to pants about 1815.

Pilgrim Place opens drive for $2.5 million

NEW CENTER — A $2.5 million project has been announced for Pilgrim Place in Claremont. A proposed health services center, pictured above, will have a 49-bed skill nursing facility. It also will house the food service and preparation for the center and for the personal care apartments at Pitzer Lodge and those planned for the present McCabe Rest Home which the health care center will replace.

Pilgrim Place in Claremont has opened a drive for $2.5 million "to improve health care and extend community outreach," said G. Worth George, executive director of the Christian workers' reitrement center.

Almost half way to its goal with $1,230,000 in gifts and pledges received, the fund program is based on a study of the needs of the 32-acre colony and its relationship to the surrounding community.

Construction of a new health services center and adaptation of the present health facility, the McCabe Rest Home, into 16 personal care apartments are central features of the plan.

Frederick Sontag, Pomona College professor of philosophy who is chairman of the Pilgrims' Progress fund campaign, said it is larger than anything attempted in the history of Pilgrim Place.

R. Stanton Avery, president and chairman of the board of Avery International, is vice chairman for the campaign. Morris B. Pendleton of San Marino and Mrs. Frank Roger Seaver of Los Angeles are serving as counselors.

Also serving on the committee for Pilgrims' Progress are Daniel G. Aldrich of Irvine, Mrs. Miriam Spaulding of South Pasadena, Charles B. Stauffacher of Chicago, John C. Bennett, Howard R. Bowen, Harold E. Fey, John W. Flucke, Mrs. G. Merrill Lenox, Gordon E. Michalson and Clifford W. Petitt, all of Claremont, and Ferdinand F. Fernandez, Charles T. Richardson and Hugh T. Verano, all of Pomona.

Foundations have indicated their support, and members of the Pilgrim Place board and corporation and other friends have made pledges and gifts in the pre-campaign solicitation period. But the largest support received to date has come from the residents themselves.

This group of 300 persons set themselves a goal of $750,000.

Speaking for Clifford W. Pettit, chairman of the residents' committee for Pilgrims' Progress, Dr. Harold E. Fey, a member of the committee, told the Pilgrim Place annual meeting, "Not all the returns are in but to date the amount of the gifts from residents is $596,289."

It was also reported that Mr. Avery, who is the son of former residents of Pilgrim Place, has made a $200,000 pledge to the campaign.

Plans for construction of the proposed new health services center have followed a year study of the needs of the community. Residents, members of the board and community leaders as well as officials of neighboring retirement homes, were consulted.

Gerontological Planning Associates (GPA) of Santa Monica managed the research.

The proposed building is designed for cost efficiency and will have 49 beds. It will replace th McCabe Rest Home, built in 1951, which can't be kept up to present strict code requirements. McCabe is of sound construction and will be adapted for additional personal care apartments for approximately $500,000.

The health services center will be located on a four-acre site newly purchased by Pilgrim Place on the west border. It will have three wings for patient rooms, including one section for the mentally impaired. These will open by sliding doors on an outdoor living space or courts. At the end of each wing will be a two-room suite where members of a patient's family may stay with him or her overnight.

Each section's living-dining room and large park-like patio will encourage patients to walk about and take an interest in the surroundings.

A geriatric clinic with class and conference rooms, will be situated so that outpatients will have easy access to the rehabilitation department without passing through the bed care areas.

A second report by Gerontological Planning Associates includes a survey of the present state of geriatric care in the region. It reveals a community-wide need to focus attention on the elderly patient.

The new health services center at Pilgrim Place, GPA points out, can serve as an information and referral center for health care services that are available to geriatric patients.

It is anticipated that about one third of the 49-bed nursing section of the new center will be open to non-residents of Pilgrim Place.

Opportunities for named memorials are listed in a brochure available at the office of Pilgrim Place, 660 Avery Road, Claremont.

Construction will begin when sufficient funds are received George said. He hopes that ground can be broken by the summer of 1978.

Push bill to keep saccharin

WASHINGTON (AP) — As a government agency plans the end of saccharin-sweetened soft drinks, Congress is considering legislation that might keep the diet beverages on the market.

Rep. James G. Martin, R-N.C., said Thursday he will continue to push his bill relaxing a 19-year-old law that has been cited as the legal basis for the proposed ban on the artifical sweetener saccharin in foods and beverages.

"It's a nuisance not to have saccharin available in the forms that people are used to having them," Martin said.

He spoke after the Food and Drug Administration said it is sticking to its plan announced last month to ban saccharin use this summer in foods and beverages because the substance caused bladder cancer in rats.

However, the agency said it plans to allow saccharin to be sold as a nonprescription drug as long as containers bear a health warning.

Martin has obtained 184 cosponsors to his bill to repeal the "Delaney Amendment" of 1958.

That amendment to the food and drug laws requires the FDA to ban any substance that causes cancer in man or animals.

Rep. Jim Mattox of Texas, a supporter of Martin's bill, said, "allowing saccharin to be sold as an over-the-counter drug is virtually meaningless for the people who still must limit their intake of sugar but want to enjoy packaged foods, canned goods, soft drinks and candy just like everyone else."

Rep. Paul Rogers, D-Fla., and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., chaired hearings last month into the proposed saccharin ban.

Rogers said his subcommittee will continue considering legislation that would permit saccharin use. Kennedy was not available for comment but aides said both Kennedy and Rogers are awaiting reports on the reliability of studies used by the FDA as the basis for the proposed ban.

Mattox said, "when these reports are completed I will request early hearings on the matter."

In other comment on the FDA action, Dr. Sidney Wolfe of Ralph Nader's Health Research Group expressed support for the agency. "There is not one published, scientific study that shows that saccharin helps people to lose weight," he said.

However supporters of saccharin use criticize the FDA action. David Carter, a board member of the Juvenile Diabetes Association, said he was concerned about teen-age diabetics.

"A teenager who has diabetes can go to a party to find that everyone else is drinking soft drinks. The teenager wants to be like his or her peers. The teenager doesn't want to say, 'I have diabetes. I shouldn't drink that.' If there are no soft drinks with saccharin, many teenagers will drink those with sugar," Carter said.

Insulation benefits will be retroactive

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Any future benefits authorized as incentives for insulating home attics will be retroactive for work done on or after April 26, the state Public Utilities Commission has ruled.

The agency is studying the possibility of authorizing incentives for ceiling or attic insulation which may be needed to implement home insulation assistance and financing provisions of a new law.

The PUC said Tuesday it wants to encourage people considering such retrofit insulation to proceed without fear they will forfeit any advantage which may result. The order may not be issued until late this year or early next year.

However, the commission stressed that the final order may find that no payment or incentives will be approved.

It also said that to substantiate a retroactive claim, the consumer must have solicited at least two bids in writing, have proof of payment for insulation with the date of sale, and have written certification from the contractor.

WASHINGTON (AP) — William Stapp has been named curator of the newly established department of photographs at the National Portrait Gallery here, according to gallery director Marvin Sadik.

Stapp previously held a joint position at the Philadelphia Museum of Art and the Princeton University Art Museum, where he compiled a catalogue of the University's photography collection.

News to use

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you're a student receiving veterans benefits, plan ahead. You'll have to wait longer than usual between checks.

More than 1.5 million veterans, dependents and service members are affected by a change in payment dates announced by the Veterans Administration.

In the past, checks were issued on the first of the month. Now, the VA will send them out at the end of the month. That means a one-time, two-month gap in payments.

Students will get their May checks, as usual, on or about the first of the month. The next checks will arrive at the end of June. After that, the checks will arrive once a month, but at the end, instead of the beginning, of the period.

HELP TRACK DOWN DANGEROUS PRODUCTS — Did you ever cut yourself on a power tool? Walk into a glass door? Fall off a stepladder?

The Consumer Product Safety Commission says more than 20 million people are injured in and around their homes every year and 30,000 of them are killed. If you have been injured by a consumer product or have noticed a hazard connected with one, the commission wants to hear about it.

There's a toll-free number you can call from anywhere in the United States to register a complaint or comment with the commission. The number is 800 638-2666. In Maryland, call 800 492-2937.

For details on the commission and how you can help, call the toll-free number above and ask for the pamphlet "Your Voice Counts."

CIGARETTES RETESTED — Two brands of cigarettes have been re-tested by the Federal Trade Commission and new tar and nicotine ratings listed.

At the request of the manufacturer, the commission rechecked Kent Golden Lights and found 8 milligrams of tar and 0.6 milligrams of nicotine per cigarette. In the annual testing results issued last fall, Golden Lights had been rated at 8.8 milligrams of tar and 0.65 of nicotine.

Parliament cigarettes, meanwhile, have been reformulated and also were re-tested. The results, compared to last year's ratings, were:

—King size filter, hard pack: 10 milligrams of tar, down from 14.6; 0.6 milligrams of nicotine, down from 0.79.

—King size filter, soft pack: 10 milligrams of tar, down from 14.9; 0.6 milligrams of nicotine, down from 0.82.

—Filter 100 mm soft pack: 12 milligrams of tar, down from 16.3; 0.7 mlligrams of nicotine, down from 0.94.

AEROSOL WARNINGS — It may be time to start looking for alternatives for some of the aerosols you use.

Many of these products will soon have to carry warning labels. Officials hope the labels will discourage use of the products pending development of rules to ban some aerosols completely.

The Food and Drug Administration will require warnings on aerosols using fluorocarbon propellants starting Oct. 31. The Environmental Protection Agency has already done this on aerosol pesticides, and the Consumer Product Safety Commission is taking similar action.

Not all aerosols use fluorocarbons. Many of those which do not, say so on their labels.

The National Academy of Sciences reported last year that some aerosol propellants, known as chlorofluorocarbons, rise into the stratosphere and deplete the earth's ozone layer, which filters out harmful ultraviolet radiation from the sun.

The FDA's labeling action is final, but the product safety commission's plans for requiring warning labels must undergo a 30-day comment period before final regulations are published. To comment, write to the Secretary, CPSC, Washington, D.C., 20207.

TODAY'S TIP — Don't let sediment build up in the bottom of your water heater. It lowers the heater's efficiency and wastes energy, according to the Federal Energy Administration. Drain a few buckets from the heater once a month to flush the sediment. There's a faucet near the bottom of most heaters for this purpose.

HOW'S YOUR HEART? — The North Hills Church of Seventh-day Adventists, Claremont, and Loma Linda University will sponsor an all-day fitness valuation program Sunday, May 1 at the Baseline Recreation Center, Claremont. Edmund Gaines, coronary respiration technician, gives Claremont Mayor Bertye Smith a walk on a treadmill which will be used in an electrocardiogram stress test. The public is invited, but pre-registration is necessary.

Church plans spring festival

Our Lady of Lourdes Catholic Church parish in Montclair will sponsor a "spring festival" Saturday and Sunday, starting both days at 10 a.m.

On Saturday, a dance is set from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. in the Father Mackey Memorial Hall. The Los Tiburones will provide the dance music.

The festival will include games, rides and booths, with booth items including food, macrame, paintings, jams, jelly, plants, pottery, sewing, needlework and artifacts.

Persons wishing to donate items for the booths may contact Mrs. Kathryn Wilson, chairman of the Altar Society's arts and crafts booth, Mrs. Lucille McSweeney, Mrs. Mary Luster or Mrs. Arthur Novelli.

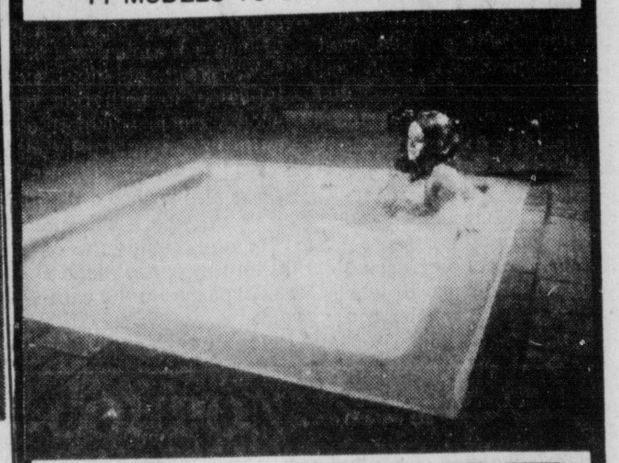

A Mexican dinner will be served Saturday from 5 to 7 p.m. and an Italian dinner on Sunday, noon to 5 p.m.

Proceeds will support the parish's educational programs.

Grand jury asked to decide on Watson

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The county grand jury has been asked to determine whether Assessor Phillip Watson, under fire for alleged misconduct, should be removed from office.

County supervisors Tuesday voted to refer to the grand jury and the district attorney all material and hearing transcripts involving Watson.

Watson is in Palm Springs recuperating from open-heart surgery he had last month and was unavailable for comment.

The supervisors' vote asked the jury consider three questions raised by Supervisor Baxter Ward:

—Whether an accusation of misconduct in office can be lodged against Watson on charges that he showed tax favoritism to a campaign contributor, George Konheim.

New water treatment plant in Pomona is officially dedicated

By ED PRATHER
PB Staff Writer

A water treatment plant that will convert 10 million gallons of raw sewage a day into crystal-clear water was officially dedicated in Pomona Wednesday.

Federal and state officials hailed the facility as a step forward in the nation's effort to conserve two precious resources: water and energy.

Although the treated water is not recommended for drinking, American University professor Martha Sager, water quality adviser to the Environmental Protection Agency, said the treated water was more pure than what many Americans presently drink.

"We drink worse than this in the East," said Dr. Sager solemnly.

Maj. Gen. Frank Schober, Gov. Edmund Brown Jr.'s drought task force director, agreed and took a sample drink of the water after touring the plant.

"Delicious," Schober told startled observers.

Schober's real enthusiasm for the $3 million facility, however, was based on the tremendous savings of water and energy that will result daily.

"Throwing things away is no longer feasible. We must realign our priorities and change our habits. We must change waste into a usable factor in our economy. This facility is a big step in that direction," said Schober.

Sewage from Pomona, Claremont and La Verne flows into the plant, where solid wastes and bacteria are removed before the water flows through the new carbon filtered tertiary treatment works.

The end product is nearly pure water, usable for agricultural, industrial and recreational needs. It is clear, odorless and clean to the taste, although health experts say it is not recommended for prolonged human consumption.

The treated water will be carried by a special pipeline for irrigation use at Cal Poly and Bonelli Regional Park. Several Pomona industries are also interested in purchasing the water.

Paul DeFalco Jr., regional director for the Environmental Protection Agency, predicted the plant will serve as a catalyst for other sections of the country.

"It's not a panacea for all our water pollution and conservation problems, but facilities such as this are an important part of our plans," said DeFalco.

The EPA official estimated the nation will spend billions of dollars constructing similar facilities in the next 10 years. 'Five are already under construction in other parts of Los Angeles County.

In addition to conserving water itself, considerable energy savings will be realized since it takes more power to pump fresh water out of the ground than it does to operate the treatment plant.

"There's no way to pump the water saved here to the drought areas in Northern California, but the energy saved here can be used in the northern part of the state where farmers and businessmen may face energy blackouts and brownouts," said Schoder.

The facility, which went into operation several weeks ago, was financed by the federal government, state, and Los Angeles County Sanitation District.

England's Lord Lytton revisits Cal Poly campus

By VONNE ROBERTSON
PB Staff Writer

The rolling hills of the famous Kellogg Ranch west of Pomona are now covered with buildings and other facilities as the ranch has, over the years, been developed as Cal Poly Pomona.

Only the outstanding Arabian horses racing across the fields and parading in the show rings remind visitors of the heritage of this campus.

This heritage — the development of the W.K. Kellogg Ranch as a center for fine imported Arabian stock in the late 1920s — drew an Englishman, closely involved with those horses, back to California after a 51-year absence.

Lord and Lady Lytton of Somerset and Sussex, England, stayed at Kellogg West on the campus and participated in a series of programs and social events.

"I first saw the ranch in 1926," recalls Lord Lytton. "The ranch then consisted of some old stables and a series of pumps for the artesian wells which dotted the area."

During his first visit, Lord Lytton stayed at the Santa Monica home of Kellogg's son, Dr. Carl Kellogg.

Lord Lytton's mother, Baroness Wentworth, was a widely recognized authority on Arabian horses.

She had arranged for the shipping of fine-blooded breeding stock to Kellogg. In addition to selling stock to the ranch owner, Baroness Wentworth had also presented as gifts valuable horses to Kellogg and to his former agent.

Lord Lytton claims not to be an expert in horses, but was serving just as his mother's representative at the time of the sale.

"In 1926, I was returning from Kenya where I served as the commanding officer with the King's Regiment. Because I had contracted malaria, I was given a six-month's leave of absence," Lord Lytton explained.

"I met Kellogg in Battle Creek, Mich., and was impressed by his direct approach as we discussed the finer points of the various animals in the shipment.

"Unfortunately, my honesty in answering questions about the horses so angered my mother that she never spoke to me again during the last 30 years of her life."

Kellogg suggested that Lord Lytton, then 26, take a circle train trip across the United States and visit various sights.

"I saw the Grand Canyon, Yosemite, Yellowstone and even went fishing off Catalina Island," Lord Lytton reported. "I understand that Old Faithful at Yellowstone still erupts every 58 minutes."

During the Englishman's first visit to Kellogg, he also met the cereal king's grandson, Norman Williamson Jr., now of Claremont.

It was Williamson who suggested the return visit to Kellogg Foundation officials.

An author of several books and a member of the House of Lords, the visitor says his present interest in horses is limited to keeping several for his family to ride.

But he has been active in farming and is proud of the fact that he and his wife and their five children have reclaimed two weed-filled lakes and can now use them for fishing and boating.

Today, he will participate in a television program, discussing economic and political issues of England and the United States with three Cal Poly professors.

Then the couple will accompany Williamson on a visit to San Diego.

VISITING CAMPUS

Lord and Lady Lytton are staying at Kellogg West on the Cal Poly Pomona campus and participating in numerous activities. Lord Lytton first visited the campus in 1926 when it was the Kellogg Ranch. His mother sold W.K. Kellogg several of the Arabian horses for which the ranch gained international fame.

Animal control services pact OK'd in Walnut

By DAVID READER
PB Correspondent

A contract for animal control services by the Humane Society of Pomona Valley for the City of Walnut was approved by the City Council Wednesday night.

The agreement, which will begin on July 1 and run for one year, supersedes Walnut's current arrangement with Los Angeles County for animal control.

City Manager Vern Lawson said the change to the Pomona organization was made mainly for the convenience of city residents who will have the public pound facilities closer to them. The county's nearest animal pound is in Baldwin Park.

Lawson also said the level of service in the city by the local humane society will be triple that of what the county provided.

In addition to providing pound facilities, the contract calls for the organization to issue dog license, collect fees for the licenses, and enforce city "leash laws."

Lawson said citizens without county licenses that do not expire until after the new agreement goes into effect, will be issued licenses by the humane society upon expiration of the older licenses. These will cover the period of the contract.

In other action, the council passed a resolution approving the submitting of an application for state funds for a park development project.

The money allocated to the city by the state under a park bond act passed by the voters last year is $26,600. The site selected by the city is 23 acres in the Collegewood area of the city.

Two-jury system gets opposition from Grand Jury

By BOB NAGEY
PB Staff Writer

The Los Angeles County Grand Jury came out in opposition Wednesday to a proposal that would create a two-jury system in Los Angeles County.

The grand jurors claimed such a split would "weaken" the present system.

The split, along with several other reforms, was advocated by the county Board of Supervisors as a means of keeping up with the work of the Grand Jury. Those recommendations are now before the California Legislature in a measure sponsored by Sen. Alfred H. Song, a Monterey Park Democrat.

The proposals are also being backed by the Los Angeles County Superior Court.

They include not only a split Grand Jury, but also changes that would allow witnesses in criminal cases to be represented by attorneys, staggered terms for jurors, and a new way of selecting members.

Hugh L. Henshaw, the Grand Jury foreman, and Jeane Weldon Dole, chairman of its ad hoc committee on reforms, contend the changes would weaken rather than strengthen the Grand Jury.

They contend that splitting the Grand Jury — providing one body to consider criminal cases and another to handle civil cases and investigation of county departments — "would reduce the civil function of the Grand Jury to the level of an advisory commission.

"Currently, the Grand Jury is the only body with the necessary legal powers to effectively review the functioning of local government from the citizen's viewpoint."

They said they did not need an "independent" prosecutor, as suggested by the reform bill, because they are satisfied with the service provided by the district attorney's office.

They also claimed there was no need for attorneys to accompany witnesses to hearings because the witnesses themselves are rarely placed on trial and the attorneys would interfere with the hearing and provide poor advice to their clients.

Ed Edelman, chairman of the Board of Supervisors, is sponsoring the reforms on the county level. He contends the Grand Jury system of today is "too archiac" to keep up with changing times.

But the Grand Jury report claims the changes would be "against the best interest of the public."

Ironworker killed in Kaiser mishap

A 51-year-old ironworker was killed Wednesday when a 40-foot-long girder fell on him at the construction site of a new oxygen plant at Kaiser Steel in Fontana.

Harry Leroy Hidey of La Mirada, an employe of the Kaiser Fabrication Division, was pronounced dead on arrival at Kaiser Foundation Hospital.

According to sheriff's deputies, Hidey was crouched beside the girder sitting lengthwise on the ground when it toppled over on top of him.

Deputies said that workers had picked up the girder with a crane when they noticed that the crane's cables were tangled.

They set the girder back down, and while one man untangled the cables, Hidey began placing softeners on the girder to keep its sharp edges from cutting the cable.

As the girder began to topple, the crane operator tried to take the slack out of the cable, but the machinery did not respond quickly enough to save Hidey.

The girder was lifted again to free Hidey's pinned body.

Company officials could not say what caused the girder to topple.

Detectives seek responsibility in woman's death

Sheriff's homicide detectives planned today to consult with the district attorney's office about possible criminal responsibility in the gunshot death early Monday of a young West Covina woman.

The woman, Beverly Jo Reason, died of the wound several hours after she was shot in her head inside the residence at 17051 Dubesor St. in Valinda.

Investigators said that the victim was wounded by her boyfriend, Steven Bishop. Bishop, they said, told them that the shooting was an accident and that the weapon fired as he placed it on a table. Others present confirmed Bishop's statement, investigators said, and he was not arrested at the time of the incident.

Let sun shine on our judges

The crime problem has caused serious concern among the citizens of California for a long time. This concern is reflected in a variety of ways, with polls showing overwhelming public support for reinstitution of the death penalty and other steps to crack down on criminals, particularly the repeat offenders.

There is another related area that creates a great deal of frustration among voters — judicial elections. We presently ask our citizens to periodically reelect judges, but ask them to do so in a vacuum.

Many of our citizens believe that our courts are turning criminals loose on reduced verdicts, acquittals, or unwarranted grants of probation, but have no independent means of knowing if the judges they are being asked to reelect year after year are responsible for this most vexing problem.

The means for keeping track of how judges sentence are very difficult under current law. While jurists must state their reasons in the court minutes when a case is dismissed in the interest of justice, there is nothing in the law providing for opening up those statements to public scrutiny.

That's why State Sen. Newton R. Russell of Montrose has introduced to the Senate SB 195, the Judges' Open Record Act. This bill would require that any time a judge in a felony case accepts a plea or decides on a sentence, the judge who takes this action shall state on the record his or her reasons for the decision. All required statements shall be transcribed and filed in the records of each case, and a copy of each statement must be filed separately, indexed by the name of the judge and made available for public inspection.

It is time to let the sun shine in on our criminal court judges and their actions. If readers agree, they can let key legislators know before the bill is heard in the Senate Judiciary Committee on May 10.

Senators on that committee are Chairman Alfred E. Song, Vice Chairman George Deukmejian, Robert G. Beverly, Dennis Carpenter, Milton Marks, Alan Robbins, David A. Roberti, Bob Wilson, andGeorge Zenovich.

Don't forget to write to our own State Senator, Ruben Ayala. All of these people can be reached at the State Capitol, Sacramento, 95814.

Pruning the bureaucracy

There is no doubt that President Carter's repeated campaign promises to reduce and reshape "the horrible, bloated bureaucracy" of government struck a responsive chord in a public weary of supporting such a burden.

True to his promises, the President has now obtained legislation enabling him to carry out what he himself concedes was his most consistent campaign theme. The reorganization bill gives him broad powers to reform the federal bureaucracy—a hodgepodge of some 1,900 agencies employing more than two million civilians.

It remains now to see how well and faithfully the new administration delivers on its promise. There is nothing easy about bringing under control a huge and entrenched bureaucracy.

Indeed, based on administration performance to date one must counsel a healthy skepticism. Campaigner Carter promised, for example, that President Carter would cut the White House staff by 30 per cent. Instead the White House staff has grown by 30 per cent since he took office.

In fairness, there are certain structural impediments that make it very difficult to end waste and promote efficiency in government. The bureaucrat whose fief is threatened knows wiles that would make Svengali himself writhe in envy.

Moreover, many offices that should be dismantled are protected by specific acts of Congress. For example, there are 1,175 advisory boards and committees that cling to the government like limpets, and Carter quite properly ordered them weeded out.

To his dismay, however, he discovered that of this number only 16 could be dissolved simply by presidential edict. The rest, established by Congress, will endure until and unless Congress goes through the tedious business of snuffing them out one by one.

We have doubts, as we say, but nothing would please us more than to see the White House deliver on the statement it uttered when the reorganization bill was signed: "The average citizen . . . can anticipate that the efficiency and quality of government service will be improved."

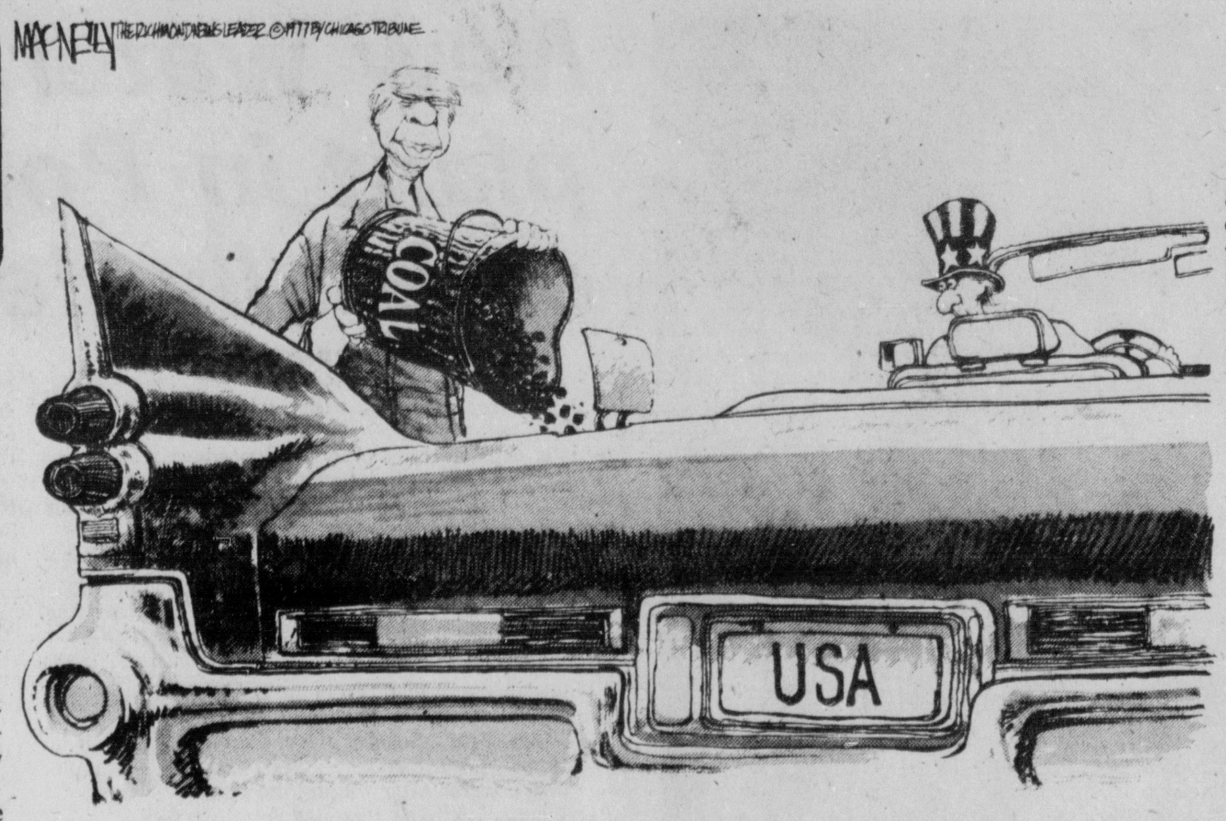

May the pruning shears remain sharp.

Thought

And in the morning, a great while before day, he rose and went out to a lonely place, and there he prayed. — Mark 1:35

"Get away from the crowd when you can. Keep yourself to yourself, if only for a few hours daily." — Arthur Brisbane, American journalist.

Government is the problem

Dear Editor:

We are short of oil. We are short of water. We are short of energy. We are short of many strategic materials.

To combat this state of affairs we are asked to save and sacrifice. Along with that we note high increases in pay to elected and appointed federal officials. It would seem that sacrifices are in style for the other fellow, but not in Washington, D.C.

When President Carter convinces me that his administration is willing to sacrifice, save and be responsible to all of us, I will cooperate and work hard to solve our various problems.

The solution, unfortunately, doesn't lie with government because basically government is the problem.

George Callaway

Just another game?

Dear Editor:

I have never been one to write letters of complaint but one thing I would like to understand. A while back they came out in our paper saying we had no water shortage here, that we could go until 1980 with no rain and still have water. Now they come out and tell us we have to cut back 10 per cent from last year or pay double.

Is this just another game like the gasoline, sugar and coffee? I just talked to my nurseryman and he told me there was water they had never even touched. Now are we supposed to let all our yards go and let everything go back to looking like a desert? Pomona already has enough bad looking places without adding a lot more while some of us work hard to preserve the green and beauty of this valley.

Ethics code tough on Congress

WASHINGTON — The tough new House ethics code is forcing many congressmen to choose between their hefty outside incomes and early retirement.

Beginning in the next session of Congress, no member can earn more than $8,625 from outside ventures. The code, which was supposed to help justify their recent salary hikes to $57,500, will make some members either abandon lucrative private sidelines or pack their bags.

Take the case of Rep. Otis Pike, D.-N.Y., the dapper, white-haired former chairman of the House Select Committee on Intelligence. He now serves on a key health subcommittee, where he has sponsored several bills on Medicare and hospitals.

At the same time, Pike is also vice president and director of Long Island Home Ltd., which owns a nursing home and a psychiatric hospital. In fact, Pike owns 26 per cent of these medical facilities.

One of the facilities, South Oaks Psychiatric Hospital, receives over $1 million a year in Medicare payments from the federal government. The Broadlawn Manor Nursing Home receives between $50,000 and $100,000 a year from Medicare.

Meanwhile, Pike has sponsored a statute insuring that 1976 Medicare payments to doctors would be no lower than those for 1975. The same law granted temporary waivers of some nursing staff requirements to small hospitals in rural areas.

But the popular, nine-term liberal has also proposed cracking down on Medicare fraud.

Pike insisted there is no conflict of interest involved. "It's only a conflict of interest if it benefits me or my hospital," he told our reporter Jane Winebrenner. "All hospitals receive Medicare payments."

When asked if legislation he has introduced has benefitted him or his hospital, Pike paused for a long time, then said softly: "I know it hasn't."

The Long Island Democrat refused to tell us how much money he earns as vice president of the medical facilities, but he admitted it was over the $8,625 limit in the new ethics code.

Pike wouldn't rule out resigning from Congress, or quitting Long Island Home, where he has been a director for 29 years. "I reconsider every two years whether I will run for Congress," he told us.

SECRET TAX BREAKS: The White House has blocked an attempt to shed more light on the secret operations of the Internal Revenue Service (IRS).

For years, the IRS has made confidential rulings on tax breaks for corporations and well-to-do taxpayers. The agency responds to specific requests from these big shots with a "private letter ruling," which then sets a legal precedent for future tax deductions in similar cases. But the average taxpayer has no way of knowing about these private tax breaks and thus can't take advantage of them. Even Congress has no access to the secret decisions. Recently, however, after a federal court order, Congress approved a plan to release the hidden rulings.

But here's the catch: Only new rulings must be made public. And, even on the new rulings, key facts (such as names of the companies involved) are being withheld. Past rulings can be released only if the White House grants additional funds to publish them as the IRS has requested. The Office of Management and Budget, however, turned down the request cold.

Although the agency received past funding to make 30,000 rulings a year, we have learned the IRS actually makes only 3,000 to 6,000. The others are simply rubber-stamp approvals that cost virtually nothing, according to Tax Analysts and Advocates, a public interest group.

Meanwhile, a select group of high-powered New York and Washington attorneys has cornered a "black market" on past private rulings. They have been peddling them to the highest bidder.

Footnote: A White House spokesman told us that other expenditures took priority over publishing the rulings. Besides, he added, the IRS seems to feel that the matter was "not that important." But the IRS insists it asked for more money and shouldn't be blamed by the White House.

Paul Harvey

Our hospitals are the finest

Seven days in May (May 8-14) will be National Hospital Week. After that we can go back to taking for granted our nation's 7,156 hospitals — unless or until we visit in pain or in tears.

Before and after National Hospital Week some will mean-mouth the medical profession generally and mention hospitals only to repeat some story relayed through some friend of a friend of a neighbor's relative.

But — if only this once a year — let's hear it for the hospital!

Your parents had a life expectancy of 47.3 years. You can expect to live half-again that long. We must be doing something right. In just the past five years our nation's death rate has been reduced by nearly five per cent!

Improved medical treatment has diminished every major death threat except two — and for those two we have mostly ourselves to blame: suicide and lung cancer.

The cost of hospitalization? Dreadful!

Until you recognize that hospitals operate around the clock, seven days a week at a per-hour cost to the patient which is half what we pay the TV repairman.

Let's hear it for the hospital!

Nationwide, hospitals employ 3 million people — five times more than the automobile industry. Those payrolls nourish our public treasury and our hometown economy.

In 1929 hospitals contributed 3.6 percent to our nation's GNP: today 8.3 percent.

Your hospital charges more for patient care? Hear this: Hospitals spend more than ever before. In 1929 $3.6 billion. This year more than $120 billion.

Your hospital bill has increased 300 percent in the past 20 years: the costs of operating a hospital have increased 300 percent in the past 10 years.

And hospitalization would cost you much more than it does except for the ceaseless efforts by administrators and personnel to share services, share equipment and improve personnel efficiency.

In the last seven years there has been a 45 percent increase in the number of clinical laboratory tests performed per man-hour.

Yet despite improved efficiency, overhead is such that only 1-in-10 of America's finest teaching hospitals is able to operate in the black — and those by less than 2 percent.

Much of the increased overhead reflects more sophisticated technology.

But these costs have to be measured against the harvest: transplants, bypass surgery, megavoltage therapy.

Your grandfather had to go to Mayo's for specialized treatment now commonly available in your hometown community hospital.

There are now 400 American hospitals with bypass teams. Intensive care, unheard of a few decades ago, is available now in 63 percent of our hospitals: 31.9 percent are equipped for cardiac intensive care: 69.8 percent for respiratory therapy; 31.3 percent have nurseries for prematures.

Let's hear it for the hospital!

So far I've said nothing about the punishing effects of inflation and arbitrary hiring quotas and mandatory government safety modification. To comply with just one bureaucratic edict last year cost Florida hospitals $50 million.

And the malpractice insurance menace has multiplied that cost in some places 1,000 percent in one year!

And while you and I are staggered by the increased per-day cost of hospitalization — balance that against this:

Our hospitals, whether six beds or more than 3,000, general or specialized, are now able to expedite treatment and-or therapy so that the average patient is out of the hospital in fewer days.

American hospitals, at whatever cost, are by all measures the world's finest. They have given us back workdays we would have lost and have credited our personal account with additional pain-free years of life itself.

If only for this seven days in May, let's hear it for the hospital!

Just in jest

Why can't old celebrities retire like the rest of us and spend their declining years playing golf, crocheting, fertilizing their back yard gardens or writing letters to their newspapers bemoaning the fact that the world no longer appreciates the old-time virtues? But no! Celebrities all too often never retire. They just become aging authorities. — And there you have my pet peeve for the day.

Just because a guy once sang songs reasonably well doesn't, so far as I am concerned, make him an authority on milk, bacon and a sure cure for acne. And somehow I find myself feeling a bit embarrassed for that aging economist who, for a fast buck, is willing to appear on a TV commercial and advise me to buy a certain brand of hamburger.

Then there are the one-time football greats, the fading Miss Americas and the ex-Olympic medal winners who are forever breaking in on my favorite TV programs to tell me how I should eat, sleep, dress, keep myself physically fit and even prepare myself to meet my maker.

But perhaps the greatest let-down of them all is when a songstress I had idolized down through the years appears on my television screen to tout the curative magic of a well-known brand of kidney pills.

Tempest over retiree fete

By EARL G. WATERS

A minor tempest has risen in connection with the forthcoming retirement of State Registrar of Contractors Leo B. Hoschler. It seems some of his friends are putting together a dinner to honor him on the occasion.

Hoschler, a World War II Marine, is concluding 26 years of service with the agency, 16 of which have been as registrar. During that entire period not one breath of impropriety has been heard. More positively, his management of the regulatory agency, which licenses contractors and enforces the laws under which they perform services, has earned the agency nationwide recognition as a model of its kind. Hoschler himself has won plaudits throughout the country as a leader in the field, having organized a national association of contractor regulatory executives.

Nevertheless, those who occupy positions of power are bound to incur animosities and Hoschler, whose job it has been to bring actions against contractors who violate the laws and to suspend or revoke the licenses of such persons, obviously has made some enemies. So, on the eve of his career, the dinner which was to be a tribute has suddenly become controversial. While that isn't surprising, it is somewhat unexpected that a member of the board, which he has served faithfully, is a prime critic and the director of the department which supervises the agency, Richard Spohn, has joined the hunt instead of defending a loyal lieutenant.

The board member, Phillip E. Decker of San Jose, having only recently been appointed, might be excused on the grounds of ignorance. For his charges that Hoschler has been compromised by the retirement dinner ignores the fact that such affairs are more than just common, they are the normal climaxes to long careers in public service. There isn't a day that passes in state service when some employe, from the janitor to top executives, isn't being treated to a farewell luncheon or dinner.

While the Hoschler dinner at $25 a plate may be a bit more plush than others, it is far more modest than many similar affairs. Decker and Spohn have sought to make an issue over the fact that the surplus may be used to benefit Hoschler. It is the usual to overcharge for such meals so that the retiree may be presented with a gift. If the Los Angeles-staged dinner follows the pattern, the price charged will barely cover a good meal and some entertainment. Whatever gift Hoschler may receive will probably be little more than the traditional watch.

Spohn's and Decker's allegations of conflict of interest might be valid if Hoschler was soliciting donors to the affair, especially if those solicited were involved in pending actions before his office. No such charge has been made and, in fact, Spohn flat out stated he didn't question Hoschler's integrity. Hoschler has declared he has had no participation of any kind with the arrangements.

Knowing he had nothing to do with ticket sales, Spohn's demand that Hoschler report which contractors have purchased tickets and which have matters pending before him is both ridiculous and impossible. So, too, is Decker's absurd demand that Hoschler "retroactively disqualify himself" from all actions since last February. If such an action were legally possible, it would result in chaos. Fortunately, there is as much chance for retroactive disqualification of a public official as there is for being unborn.

But the inferential utterances of Spohn and Decker constitute shameful treatment. It is not only a poor reward for long public service but also does great harm to the recruitment of others into state service.

PET OF THE WEEK

Bruce Richards, executive director of the Humane Society of Pomona Valley, has his hands full with three orphaned hound-mixed pups which will be available for adoption Saturday morning at 10 at the society's animal shelter, 500 Humane Way, Pomona. The dogs are well groomed, eat a mixed diet and now are three months old. One is female; two are male. Open house will be held at the shelter Sunday from noon to 4 p.m., according to Richards.

Ann Landers

Average wife had no choice

Dear Ann: I've read your column for years and found it refreshingly realistic. But on one big issue, you aren't smelling the coffee. I refer to your poll on "Would you choose the same mate if you had it to do over?"

It's not surprising that "three males" suggested the poll. Who else chooses? Women, except for the beautiful and/or the rich, have no choice. The average female takes what she can get.

Oh, sure, you'll hear from dozens of fantasizing females telling you about the husbands they might have had, but among them there are very few serious proposals. Mostly they are ego trips — products of the imagination.

Births are about equal between the sexes, but those in power are the males. They make the decisions about big money, jobs, wars, etc. They also choose their brides, as well as the younger second wife, and later on — the mistresses.

Your poll smells, Ann, and not like coffee. — Average Amy

Dear Av: I agree that the ones on whom the gods have smiled kindly often get better breaks, but this goes for females as well as males.

I apologize for second-guessing our founding fathers, but it just isn't true that all men are created equal.

The aroma of the poll may not have been fragrant, honey, but it was certainly an eye-opener.

Dear Ann: I'm 26, attractive and a top-notch secretary. This is the fourth time I've fallen in love with a man I can't have. Three of my romances have been with men in the corporation, all married and nearly twice my age. I had high hopes the last one would divorce his wife but I was wrong.

Why do I keep running into blind alleys and dead-end streets? Do I need a wig-picker or a swift kick in the caboose? — PDQ

Dear PDQ: Some women who become involved with men who are unobtainable don't want to get married. They subconsciously protect themselves by going after what they can't have. Therapy might reveal a side of yourself you don't know. Since you repeatedly set yourself up for misery it might help to find out why — so you can stop it.

Dear Ann: A divorcee (about 30) lives in this apartment building. She has a five-year-old daughter. Our 17-year-old son practically lives at her place.

He varnishes her floors, paints her kitchen and runs her errands. Hell could freeze over before he'd do anything for me.

I got mad at him last night because he was still up there at 11:00 p.m. I walked in without knocking. (My husband says I shouldn't have done it but I was boiling.) Well, I caught them with their arms around each other. They said they were dancing. (There was no music.)

What should I do now? — Fit To Be Tied

Dear Fit: Either you or your husband should have a frank talk with Junior and make sure he knows the facts of life. ALL of them. Telling him to stay away from the woman WON'T work. In fact, it would probably make him even more determined to see her. Forbidden fruit, you know.

Compulsive liars-gamblers

If the youngster seems to be a compulsive liar, odds run high he'll turn out years later to be a compulsive gambler. Or such be the indications revealed in a University of Houston study. Interesting, if true. The why of it is a mystery. But the researchers say most though not all the compulsive gamblers who consented to interviews admitted they'd repeatedly prevaricated about almost everything for no clear reason as children.

When the surveytakers asked women in general how they felt about using "Ms." instead of "Miss" or "Mrs.," only 9 per cent said they preferred "Ms." Another 83 per cent said they'd rather use "Miss" or "Mrs." And the rest expressed no opinion.

SACCHARIN

Q. "How long have we known about saccharin? Has any human cancer ever been traced to it? Who would benefit most, finanically, by the new FDA rulings on saccharin?"

A. Saccharin was discovered 98 years ago. There's no record it has ever caused cancer in people. As for who might benefit most, I'd guess the citrus fruit interests, because of the recent development of a sugar substitute found in grapefruit rinds. Also, the sugar industry, possibly. Who knows?

Q. "How many stitches are taken in National Hockey League players every year?"

A. About 4,200 altogether is the last estimate.

Q. "Who was John Sedges?"

OLD LAW

An old Seattle law makes it illegal for a woman habitually to drink with men in taverns, but no law makes it illegal for a man habitually to drink with women in taverns. Am advised one woman once defended herself successfully against the charge by saying, "I wasn't drinking with the men. They were drinking with me."

If you want to catch small-mouth bass, why don't you drop a thermometer into the water to see if it's between 60 and 70 degrees F.? That's the temperature range in which said bass is most likely to bite. More specifically, 67 degrees F. Or so the scientist report. But if it's large-mouth bass you're after, the best temperature is from 70 to 72 degrees F., they say.

Dr. Miller

Guinea pig has its adult teeth

DEAR DR. MILLER: Patty and Mike, my 3-year-old guinea pigs, have a full set of baby teeth, and I was wondering how old they are before they lose them and their grown-up teeth come in. It happened to Bagels, my dog, when he was 5-months old. — J.N.

DEAR J.N.: Guinea pig gestation period is about the same as a dog, or a day or two longer (average 66 to 68 days), but they're considerably closer to maturity when born than are puppies. Young G.P.'s are born with eyes open and can run about well within an hour after birth. Within a few days they're eating solid food, and are weaned in ten. Guinea pigs do have temporary, or baby, teeth but they never see the light of day. They develop and are shed early, and the guinea pigs are born with a full set of adult teeth!

DEAR DR. MILLER: We're taking over the apartment of friends who are moving, because it's cheap. We're worried because their dog got sick from lead poisoning and we don't want it to happen to ours. How can you prevent something like that? — T.S.

DEAR T.S.: You'd want to search for the source of the lead that poisoned the dog. In old apartments this is frequently lead-base paint, but it could also be anything from old water pipes to linoleum. Local health department officials may help you with this determination, which is worthwhile — and not only from the standpoint of your dog. In cases where dogs have been victims of lead poisoning, children in the family are usually similarly affected.

DEAR DR. MILLER: I'm breeding lyretail guppies, but would like to see them grow faster. They don't reach their largest size till they're six months old. Another breeder I know says he adds some salt to the water to force growth. Do you agree with this concept and, if so, how much salt would you use? — G.N.

DEAR G.N.: There's nothing lackadaisical about your lyretails' growth rate. While guppies are sexually mature at less than a half that age, under normal conditions they do require six months to attain full growth. While some strains of guppies can adapt not only to brackish water but even to complete salt water to the extent of eventually breeding in it, there would be no biological advantage from this acclimatization in terms of growth rate or eventual size. Skip the salt.

No sympathy for this driver

Generally, I find people very forgiving.

If you inadvertently drive your car through their picture window, catch their neck in an elevator door, or go on a Scout Jamboree and lose one of their children, they're real good sports about it.

But if there is one human being for which there is not one ounce of compassion, it's for the driver who parks in two spaces.

You can tell a lot about the man (or woman) who sees two parking spots and pulls his car squarely in the middle of them, without ever meeting him. He's the type who eats all of his cake and leaves the icing until last so that everyone around him will feel rotten. He comes in last at church and then makes 15 people move over to the center so he can have the seat on the aisle. He leaves the price tags on his Christmas gifts, and goes to a concert with a bad cold. He sits next to you at your favorite musical for which you've just paid $16 a ticket, and hums the overture.

He holds his kid up in front of everyone at the zoo so he can see the animals and no one else can. He borrows a pound of butter from you for a cookout — and returns oleo. He saves seats for eight people at the World Series.

He wouldn't pay for a flu shot unless he could get it wholesale. His mother begs him not to visit her at the home.

I'm trying to talk my Congressman into having these drivers register, so we can keep track of them, know where they are, and how many there are of them, because there are no physical characteristics to set them apart from your ordinary citizen.

In fact, I had lunch with one the other day and didn't even realize it until we went to the parking lot for his car. The lot was crowded and his little sports number was centered squarely between the lines of two spots.

He looked a little embarrassed about it and said, "It's my doors. You park next to another car and you get your doors beat up."

"May you get sideswiped by a drunken camel," I said.

"Hey, do you blame me?" he said defensively. "I mean, why should I take a chance on getting my doors scratched?"

"Don't tell it to me," I said. "Explain it to that woman who has been circling around this parking lot for 20 minutes trying to find an empty spot."

As I told my Congressman, if you can't get these drivers to register, at least have them wear a bracelet of some kind like the ones saying, "I'm a Methodist" or "Blood Type AB." This one would simply say, "I'm a parking hog."

"What's the point of all that?" he asked.

"Let's just say in case of an accident, he'd want us to save the doors!"

Dr. Lamb

Osteoporosis hard to treat

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am 59 and my problem is my back. I have osteoporosis. It started about 10 months ago. I had pains in my back and difficulty getting up from a chair. I didn't see my doctor for about two months. By then the pain was unbearable. I was X-rayed and they showed I had three collapsed vertebrae and my upper spine was beginning to bend forward.

I was fitted with an orthopedic back brace and I wore it for seven months. I didn't think it helped. My stomach was protruding. My waist was 26 inches all my life and now it is 34. I haven't gained any weight; I'm still 116 pounds.

The hunch in my back is worse. In fact I'm pushed forward so much that it is affecting my heart. It has a rapid irregular beat. I'm taking Inderal.

Now I have started having leg cramps at night. So bad I can't sleep. Last month I went to see an orthopedic specialist. He took X-rays and told me the same thing as my own doctor — there is no cure for osteoporosis.

He told me to walk two or three miles a day, take calcium, stick to a high protein diet which I can't because of my high cholesterol count — no eggs, whole milk, cheeses or anything with oils.

He prescribed Premarin. I still have all my female organs, and I have gone through the menopause with no problems. Why should I take Premarin and take a chance on getting cancer?

I hope you have some suggestions as I am at my wit's end.

DEAR READER — Osteoporosis, disolving bones, is hard to treat. It can progress to cause the type of problems you describe. That is why I urge women to be sure they get enough calcium in their diet. This problem is five times as common in women on calcium deficient diets.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 6-10 which outlines what we know about the treatment of osteoporosis. You may want to discuss the possibility of taking fluoride tablets, vitamin D and calcium treatments with your doctor. This method has been used with some success at the Mayo Clinic and the references to the work are included in that issue. How much reversal you can get is questionable but it is important to you that the progression be stopped. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it.

You are probably not getting enough calcium. You can take calcium pills if you need to do so. Despite your high cholesterol you can use fortified skim milk — almost devoid of fat and cholesterol and rich in calcium. You can use low-fat cottage cheese — the type that is not creamed — and you can use buttermilk. All of these foods are rich in protein and calcium. You can use mature bean seeds and spinach.

Meats do not contain much calcium. If you use lean meats, fish and poultry you will not be getting too much cholesterol. The lean flesh raw contains only about 70 milligrams in a three-and-a-half ounce (100 gram) portion. You can consume 300 milligrams of cholesterol a day and not exceed the usual allowance.

Your enlarging stomach is caused by the collapse of your vertebrae — shortening your waist and changing your posture. You need a good physical therapy program for exercises that will help but not hurt you.

(Because of the volume of mail Dr. Lamb cannot answer your letters personally but he will answer representative letters of general interest in his colunm. Write to him in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y.

Lead misleads poor South

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

North and South really staggered into six hearts. Not that their bidding was bad, but rather that they almost stopped several times along the way.

While they were moving slowly on, West was doing some thinking of his own and came to the conclusion that if they did bid a slam his best chance to beat the contract would be to lead his deuce of diamonds in the hope that he might cause South to refuse a diamond finesse that he would take later.

So, as soon as the bidding ended, West led his deuce of diamonds. There was no diamond finesse, but the lead did cause South to go wrong another way.

South went up with dummy's ace, led a spade, finessed the queen, cashed the ace, ruffed his last spade, cashed dummy's ace of trumps and was faced with the problem of getting back to his hand. He had to ruff a diamond.

He should have ruffed low. A 5-1 diamond break was less likely than a 4-1 trump break, but he did ruff high. This established West's 10 as a defensive trick and there was no way to pick up East's queen of clubs.

The answer is that this is one 13 high-card point hand that we pass in any seat. An opening bid is too likely to lead to a minus score.

West German energy fund spotlights atom power

BONN, West Germany (AP) — The West German government approved a $2.7 billion energy research program Wednesday focusing heavily on atomic power, including plutonium-based "fast breeder" reactors opposed by President Carter.

The four-year program seeks to safeguard future economic growth by finding a comprehensive answer to national energy needs and for the first time ties all types of German energy research together in an over-all funding plan.

A lion's share of the fund — $1.88 billion — is earmarked for nuclear energy research.

Still, Research Minister Hans Matthoefer told reporters that growing public resistance to nuclear energy — spurred by Carter's policies — forced his ministry to make a "pretty dramatic proportional change" toward funding more nonnuclear energy research over the next four years.

West Germany's multibillion dollar reactor construction program is threatened by environmentalist protests, authorization delays, adverse court rulings and the unsolved problem of radioactive waste disposal.

This forced the government last month to slash its 1985 target for nuclear power-generating capacity from an original goal of 45,000 megawatts to 30,000, compared to the present 6,400 megawatts.

If the reduced target is not met, a government report warned, West Germany might have to embark on a crash program of power stations fueled by coal, gas and oil to rescue the nation from recession and massive unemployment in the 1990s.

Despite the Carter administration's efforts to restrict worldwide access to potential atomic bomb fuels, more than half of the West German program's nuclear allotment — $995 million — will be spent on continued development of advanced "fast-breeder" and high temperature reactors.

The fast breeders develop plutonium, a potential A-bomb fuel, from uranium and thus could theoretically lessen German dependence on uranium imports.

West Germany is developing high temperature reactors, which run on bomb-grade, highly enriched uranium, for energy-efficient "cogeneration" projects.

Scientists believe that under these projects the high-temperature waste heat that the reactors develop in generating electric power could be piped into urban heating systems and into plants refining coal into oil, gas and chemical products.

Asked whether these plans contradict Carter's nuclear policies, Matthoefer said: "I don't see that."

Concern about nuclear power was shown also in neighboring Switzerland in a survey published Wednesday by the Federal Energy Commission.

Based on interviews with 1,079 Swiss citizens, the survey showed 42 per cent of the people oppose nuclear power stations on principle. Seven per cent said they were skeptical but considered nuclear power necessary for existence.

Hijacker regrets his flight to Cuba

HAVANA, Cuba (AP) — On Jan. 22, 1971, Garland Grant of Milwaukee, Wis., hijacked a Northwest Airlines jet to Cuba in what he now looks back on as the "dark day of my life."

On Monday of this week he started a new job sweeping floors in a Havana hotel for 75 pesos a month, about $100.

In between there were 5½ horrible years in Cuban prisons, during which he lost an eye in a beating by prison guards.

"I've been in this place six years, and I'm out of my mind. Believe me, I'm all for the United States now. I'd even wear a Nixon button," he said.

Grant, a black, said he was a member of the Black Panthers at the time he hijacked a Boeing 727 with 59 people aboard while on a flight from Milwaukee to Washington, D.C.

He said he wanted to go to Algeria, but was told the plane couldn't cross the Atlantic. He settled for Cuba instead. News accounts at the time confirm his story, and say no one was hurt in the hijacking.

Grant, now 27, told his story while sitting with a reporter on a park bench in downtown Havana. He had approached the reporter with his story. His clothes were shabby and his glass eye awkwardly motionless while his other eye shifted nervously.

"I'm probably being watched. Everybody here is too scared to say anything, but I've been (expletive) over so many times, I can't be (expletive) over any more," he said.

"They can't do anything more to me that they haven't already done but put a bullet in my head," he said at another point.

He continually pulled pieces of paper from his pockets, as if to verify what he is saying. There was a Cuban identity card showing his nationality as American and pieces of paper with addresses of where he lives and where he works.

He said he changed his name to Jesus Grant Gelbard and that he lives in a Havana hotel with about 15 other hijackers. He claims the other hijackers are as unhappy in Cuba as he is. But he declined to identify them because "they might not like it."

"I just want to get back to the United States. I'm living like a dog in Cuba," he said. He said blacks are treated badly. "There are more racism problems here than in the worst parts of Mississippi."

Grant provided the address of his parents in Milwaukee. In a telephone interview Tuesday, his mother, Mrs. Ross Grant, and a sister, Rosetta, 28, verified much of what he said. They said they knew he had been in prison and they knew he lost an eye.

In the park in Havana, Grant said his main object in life now is to get out of Cuba, but he doesn't know how. He said he is trying to get help from the Swiss embassy, which represents U.S. interests in Cuba. The United States and Cuba do not have diplomatic relations.

He said he knows he would go to prison in the United States for the hijacking, but this doesn't bother him. "Just open my cell door, and I'll walk in," he said.

His effort to return to the United States started about six months after he arrived in Cuba. He says that is what has gotten him into the most trouble.

At first, he said, he worked for a time "digging ditches."

Then, he said, for picketing the Cuban Ministry of the Interior he went to prison. He remained there for 2½ years without any charges being filed against him.

After his release, he said, he went to the Swiss embassy but was involved in some sort of altercation with embassy personnel. He refused to say precisely what happened. But the result was a three-year sentence in prison on a charge of "disrespect for personnel of the Swiss embassy."

RECOGNITION — Vonne Robertson, PB staff writer, and Mike Ferguson, PB business manager, admire the handsome plaque presented the Progress Bulletin by United Way for its "concern for community betterment." The presentation was made at United Way's recent media luncheon in Los Angeles. The plaque cites "appreciation for the newspaper's dedication to enhance the quality of life for all people through active support of United Way and the 250 human-care agencies helped by the recent campaign." Mrs. Robertson wrote the PB's United Way articles, described by campaign leaders as "positive coverage which helped Pomona Valley." Ferguson supervised the United Way campaign effort among employes of the newspaper.

MARCH OF DIMES BENEFIT — Louie Leanos of Walnut, this year's March of Dimes poster child for Los Angeles County, is held by Randy Forney, who, along with Lex Mason, left, Kelly Sullivan and Bob Kennedy, right, are management personnel for Victoria Station, West Covina's newest restaurant which will celebrate its opening Tuesday with a March of Dimes benefit.

West Covina restaurant honors March of Dimes

West Covina's restaurant, Victoria Station, will celebrate its grand opening Tuesday with a special March of Dimes night.

The restaurant, patterned after the trains and baggage area at London's famous Victoria Station, is located off the San Bernardino Freeway between Grand and Barranca streets.

All proceeds from dinner and drinks at the grand opening will be donated to the March of Dimes' program to combat the nation's No. 1 child health problem — birth defects.

Four managers will be on hand at the benefit. They are general manager Lex Mason of Diamond Bar; managers Kelly Sullivan of Azusa and Randy Forney of Diamond Bar and kitchen manager Bob Kennedy of Hacienda Heights.

Dinner will be served starting at 5:30 p.m., and guests can make their income tax-deductable checks out directly to the March of Dimes.

For more than 38 years, the March of Dimes has strived to improve the quality of life. Research and medical service programs in the U.S. work towards the prevention, cure and treatment of birth defects.

Cook contest

It has been announced that the Georgia Chicken Cooking Contest, a preliminary cookoff to determine that state's entry in the National Chicken Cooking Contest, will be held in Plains. And the guest speaker will be Billy Carter, the new President's brother.

D.B. MAC sends letter to L.A. on ski resort

The Diamond Bar Municipal Advisory Council (MAC) will send a letter to the Los Angeles County Counsel detailing questions council members still have over the proposed Diamond Bar Mountain Ski Resort.

The council agreed Tuesday night to send the letter to the county attorneys to get an opinion on what legal posture the MAC may assume to deal with questions of noise, lighting, traffic and other concerns residents have over the proposed recreation development.

San Luis Obispo developer Warren Dolezal is proposing a 27-acre recreation facility including a 21-acre mountain ski slope composed of Astro Turf and plastic beads as well as a water slide and, when complete, a hotel, restaurant, and commercial retail area.

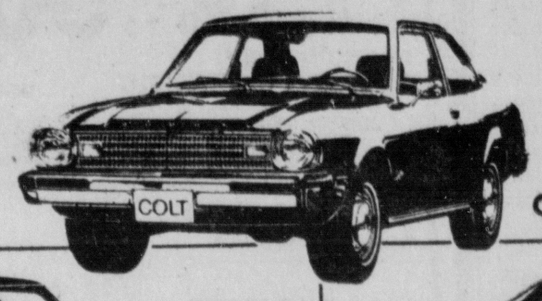

The development is proposed for the present location of the Les Jones stable.

The council also heard a report on the growing concern over graffiti in Diamond Bar. The Diamond Bar Board of Realtors will be making some proposals dealing with the problem at future meetings.

The council also voted to draft a letter to the Pomona school board in support of the Pomona Valley Juvenile Diversion project.

The new Dodge Colts.

They aren't Datsuns or Toyotas. They're a lot of little Dodge. And they run on regular leaded gas.

Colt two-door coupe.

Colt four-door wagon.

Colt four-door sedan.

The new Dodge Colt is such a lot of little import, it's got some folks confused. Because Colt is the small car lineup with the value you'd expect in an import, plus Dodge parts and service. Whether you choose Colt coupe, Colt sedan, or Colt wagon, you'll be getting standard features like whitewall tires, reclining bucket seats, carpeting, an adjustable steering column, and more. And Colt runs on regular leaded gas. So if you're thinking about a small car, think "Dodge Colt," and you'll be thinking about a lot.

L.B. museum for Spruce Goose

LONG BEACH (AP) — Howard Hughes' "Spruce Goose" airship — with a wingspan longer than a football field — may be placed in a $2 million museum here next to the Queen Mary, according to a spokesman for Hughes' Summa Corp.

Arelo Sederberg said preliminary discussions on the project had been made with a group of airplane buffs who formed a non-profit organization called Air Museum of the West. The group plans to raise $1.5 million to $2 million to build a museum for the airship and other exhibits of Western aviation history, he said.

Although Sederberg said an agreement giving the giant craft to Long Beach was a long way off, Municipal Judge Gilbert Alsten, a museum organizer, said his group was optimistic.

"We're hoping we can save the airplane," he said. "Nothing like it has ever been built before, and nothing like it probably will ever be built again."

The birchwood "Spruce Goose" has been flown only once. Hughes flew it at an altitude of about 70 feet for a mile along Long Beach Harbor on Nov. 2, 1947. Since then, it has been in an air-conditioned hangar here.

Israel talk slated

Michael Jackson, a radio and television personality, will discuss "Israel Update '77" at the Israel Independence Day Celebration and United Jewish Welfare Fund/Israel Emergency Fund rally at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, May 4 at Temple Sholom, Ontario.

He will present an up-to-date briefing on Middle East affairs and discuss human welfare needs in Israel met through the current UJWF/IEF drive.

Dr. Samuel Salen, valley chairman, said the event will provide an opportunity for valley residents to celebrate Israel's 29th anniversary of independence.

"The meeting will serve as a reminder that we are inseparably linked with the State of Israel and the welfare of its people," he added.

Woman gets life sentence for slaying

VAN NUYS (AP) — A 20-year-old North Hollywood woman has been sentenced to life in prison in the "stun gun" and crossbow killing of a West Los Angeles tobacco importer.

Superior Court Judge Charles Hughes handed down sentence Monday against Gloria Elizabeth Hernandez, also known as Jessica R. Pacino.

She was convicted March 22 of first-degree murder and first-degree robbery in the murder of Raymond A. Adem, 41, who was found at his tobacco shop on March 31, 1976. Authorities said Adem had been shot in the side with two darts from an electronic "stun gun" and in the chest with an eight-inchlong crossbow bolt.

A co-defendant, Wallace Ray West, 26, also of North Hollywood, pleaded guilty to first-degree murder Jan. 27 and was sentenced March 1 to life in prison.

Claremont council supports Juvenile Diversion Project

By GEORGE MacLAREN
PB Staff Writer

The Claremont City Council has decided to support the Pomona Valley Juvenile Diversion Project to the tune of $13,000 during fiscal 1977-78, and hopes that the Claremont Board of Education will take a similiar action next Monday night.

The council unanimously supported Mayor Bertye Smith's motion, and also an amendment by Council member Eleanor Cohen that if outside funds come in that can be used for duplicate purposes, the city would be refunded a portion of its money.

Council member Frank Hungerford, who also is chairman of the project advisory board, said the key to the project is a commitment by member agencies.

Council member Claire McDonald said she would like to see the school district also put up $13,000 because "I feel strongly they are benefiting from the project."

Speaking of the project's request for $1 per capita from each city, Council member Richard Newton said that "Up to $25,000 is very dear to us. I hate to commit that kind of money without the budget process. What programs can we afford? I agree that the school district should kick into this."

Hungerford said that Project Manager Larr Rubin and his staff are the prime reason why the project has been so successful, and that there is a possibility of losing them if local agencies don't support the project.

City Manager Norman King said that the city has some flexibility in year-end balances, and that on a one-time basis he would urge that the funding be granted.

After Mrs. McDonald suggested meeting next Wednesday to make a decision, Mayor Smith made her motion.

Two Chaffey students compete for awards

Two Chaffey College students are among the 40 college students who will compete for four top $2,000 awards and $21,000 in prize money in the finals of Bank of America's 1977 Community College awards program, May 4 at the Los Angeles Bonaventure Hotel.

The students are Liselotte Van Balgooy of Alta Loma and Randy Frankel of Chino.

Assured of at least $250 each, the students will compete for larger awards in four categories — business, technical-vocational, social science-humanities, and science and engineering. In addition to the four $2,000 first place awards, there will be four $1,000 second place awards and four $500 third place awards.

The program, also being held in Northern California, will distribute a total of $88,000 in cash awards to second-year college students. The bank also sponsors the achievement awards program for high school seniors, with more than $2 million having been awarded since that program's inception in 1948.

Unfair labor practices against board

Chino teachers file charges

By JON MORRIS
PB Staff Writer

Chino teachers, "frustrated" in their salary negotiations, have filed an unfair labor practices charge against the school board.

Associated Chino Teachers (ACT) disclosed at this week's board meeting that the charge was filed with the state's Educational Employes Relations Board (EERB).

The reason for the charge is the board's representative had established "pre-conditions" to bargaining, said Charles Sanchez, ACT president.

David Miller, board representative and member of the law firm of Patterson and Taggart, demanded at the latest bargaining session that teachers sign two "pre-conditions" — one of which was an agreement not to strike or have any work slowdown, Sanchez stated.

The second pre-condition would establish the board's "district rights" — including the right to run the district, hire and fire employes and other rights.

"Our gripe is they presented the two conditions as non-negotiable items," Sanchez explained.

Miller offered teachers a 10 per cent salary increase if the pre-conditions were met, said Sanchez. However, there would be no additional increase next year, with the salary boost covering only the remainder of the current year with no retroactive clause. "No fringe benefit increase was offered this year, but a $300 increase would take effect on July 1."

Sanchez said teachers have bargained in good faith but the board representative walked out of a recent meeting and there is a "sudden change."

Four negotiating sessions went along smoothly, he noted, but at the sixth session demands of teachers were made and wage talks were stalled.

"Personal insults" were made to teachers from the board spokesman, said Sanchez.

The EERB, which administers the state's new collective bargaining law, may set a hearing on the unfair labor practices charge, unless teachers withdraw it later.

The board took no immediate action this week on the stalled negotiations, except to indicate the board's representative will meet with teachers today at 2 p.m. and Friday at 10:30 a.m. Whether the pre-conditions again will be brought up was uncertain.

WHATA HAUL — More than 20 tons of junk are placed in piles in the City of Claremont's city yard. From left, city employes Bruce Bryant and Joe Martinez look over haul.

OLD FURNITURE — During its spring clean-up, the City of Claremont collected quite a bit of discarded furniture, all of which will be trucked to the county dump. Above, city employes Bruce Bryant and Joe Martinez show off discards Claremonters don't want.

What Claremont doesn't want makes up huge pile of junk

By GEORGE MacLAREN
PB Staff Writer

It's amazing what can appear on curbs in front of Claremont homes during the city's annual spring clean-up.

The city's crews discovered items such as discarded lawn furniture, barbecues, children's play equipment, water heaters, animal cages, washers and dryers, auto tires, TV sets, couches and mattresses waiting for them during the special pickup.

City sanitation foreman Joe Martinez stood in the usually spacious, neat city yard, and looked at the huge piles of junk that the city trucks had dumped since Monday.

"We get only part of it," Martinez commented. "People in pickup trucks get up really early and precede our crews on their rounds. The scavengers get the pick of the crop, and sometimes come back a second time."

Martinez noted that the city crews start their rounds at 6:30 a.m., but the scavengers already have coveted the choice discards.

There is no extra charge for the special once-a-year pickup, and Claremonters have taken advantage of the opportunity to clean out garages, spare rooms and backyards.

The discards are put into two piles. Items such as sofas, mattresses, lawn chair pads, and non-metallic pieces are heaped in one part of the yard.

Anything that can be deemed scrap metal is added to a pile that measures 100 by 300 feet. It puts the television series with a junkyard theme to shame.

Martinez said that his crews should be able to finish up the special pickup but he said he expects a few callbacks from persons who say they didn't receive a notice or weren't able to put all their discards in front of their home the first time around.

The city's general fund will profit from the special pickup. The scrap metal is converted into money, and last year $1,000 was realized.

Some of the unusual items discovered in the pile were rabbit hutches, a built-in stove top and a burned-out electric fan. It's amazing what you can find in a junk pile.

4 burglars in slow getaway

BALDWIN, Wis. (AP) — It was anything but a high-speed chase as police pursued and arrested four suspected burglars.

St. Croix County Sheriff Charles Grant said burglars broke into a greenhouse in Baldwin late Saturday and took $5. A short time later, he said, they entered an automatic laundry in nearby Woodville and stole $65.

Police caught up with the juveniles a short time later as they made their getaway in a tractor pulling a manure spreader.

May term registration is being taken through May 9 at LA VERNE COLLEGE. This term includes four weeks of accelerated study beginning May 9 and ending June 3.

Two special interest courses are being offered — field biology in Hawaii and a history course dealing with the modernization of East Asia in the Orient. Other opportunities during May term include directed study and independent study in most academic fields. Tuition fees are $85 per semester unit plus a $5 registration fee for May term.

The summer session includes three accelerated three- and four-week terms plus course offerings in many special interest areas.

Registration for summer sessions begins May 16. For a single $10 registration fee, students may enroll in one or more of the summer sessions at one time. The first summer session begins June 13 and ends July 1. Second session starts July 5 and ends July 29 and third session runs Aug. 1 through 26. Most summer courses offer three or four semester hours of credit and meet three hours a day Monday through Friday.

Summer tuition is $55 per semester unit of credit with courses offered for both undergraduate and graduate students.

Information regarding May term registration and summer registration can be obtained by contacting the LVC registrar's office at 593-3511, ext. 234.

Candidates for the master of fine arts degree at CLAREMONT GRADUATE SCHOOL have scheduled a variety of shows at Libra Gallery, 9th Street and Dartmouth Avenue, during May.

"Time and Again," a show by Cindy Miracle and Eric Ismay, will feature superimposed fabrics and drawings May 2 through 6.

Roger Feldman and Ted Drake have teamed for a show called "Get-A-Round," with sculpture and raku designs May 9 through 13. Ray Bravo will also exhibit drawings and paintings.

On May 16 through 20, Ben Katz and Susan Meyers will show ceramic sculpture.

Libra Gallery hours are from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

LA VERNE COLLEGE is observing Law Day by conducting a mock trial featuring former television and radio personality Joseph A. Dolan, an attorney, as the judge.

To be held Monday at 7 p.m. in La Fetra Hall, the jury will be selected from the audience. LVC law students will be the witnesses.

Dolan earned his B.A. and J.D. at Harvard University and sits on the board of directors for the local humane society. He practices law in Pomona.

Law Day, U.S.A. was first established by Presidential Proclamation in 1958. In 1961 the first day of May was set aside by joint resolution of Congress as a "Special day of celebration by the American people in appreciation of their liberties and the reaffirmation of their loyalty to the United States of America."

The public is invited to attend this free event. For more information, persons may call the LVC Law Center at 593-3511, ext. 280.

The undergraduate research program, which provides a $900 stipend to each participant, will run from July 3 through Sept. 10. Participating students will perform research under the supervision of a faculty member in such areas as artificial intelligence, software design, computer resource management and the social impacts of computing.

Ten positions in the UCI program are open to undergraduates who generally will be entering their senior year in the fall. The program is sponsored by the UCI Department of Information and Computer Science with the support of a grant from the National Science Foundation.

Students should contact Marion Earl, Department of Information and Computer Science, 833-5248, before Sunday for application information.

The construction firm of Dewitt Etheridge has been awarded the contract for the second phase of construction of CITRUS COLLEGE'S federally-funded multi-purpose education complex.

Citrus College board of trustees members, in a special meeting, accepted the firm's net low base bid of $1,411,075.

The building will house a child care center, career guidance center, job placement, cooperative education and learning assistance centers, financial aids center and college bank.

Dewitt Etheridge, a La Habra Heights firm, was also the contractor for the college's Technical C Building which was completed in 1975.

Construction of the second phase of the multi-purpose education complex will begin early in May, with completion date estimated to be in the summer of 1978.

President should pay for new ideas

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — A retired Iowa City man says President Carter should see to it that ideas people express during Carter's radio telephone talk show are protected from use by others.

William Dennis filed suit in U.S. District Court Wednesday in an attempt to block Carter's first talk show Saturday.

Dennis argued that individual ideas are a form of personal property and if they are going to be used by the Carter administration, the person making the suggestion should have some rights.

Dennis filed the action himself. Government attorneys said that Dennis failed to ask for any form of hearing on an injunction.

Claremont council will review permit for a dog kennel

By GEORGE MacLAREN
PB Staff Writer

In a surprising move, the Claremont City Council Tuesday night called up for review a conditional use permit which would allow a kennel of up to 25 dogs in northeast Claremont.

The council set a public hearing on the matter May 10.

The Claremont Planning Commission approved the permit last Tuesday after several residents protested the proposal and questioned whether the kennel was hobby-oriented or business.

A commission motion to limit the number of dogs to 16 died 3-4. The commission's final motion was to allow the kennel with the condition that the operation be reviewed in six months to determine whether the kennel had an adverse affect on the Mills Avenue-Pomello Drive neighborhood, and that at that time the kennel might be limited to 16 dogs.

According to city law, a council member may call up a commission action for review as long as the council member does it in writing within five days after receiving the commission's minutes.

Mayor Bertye Smith brought up the matter while the council was discussing other planning commission actions, and said she wanted the council to review the permit.

City Attorney William Bergman ruled that any council member could ask for a review, and that any person who spoke on the subject at the commission hearing would be notified of the council hearing.

Olive company finds use for once-worthless pits

FRESNO (AP) — Once worthless olive pits are being converted into fuel to save money and energy.

In a separate project, researchers are trying to determine whether smelly onion wastes can make economical fuel.

Both involve attempts by major California processors to reduce expensive disposal of agricultural wastes and consumption of scarce fossil fuels at the same time.

Researchers for Lindsay Ripe Olives tried for years to find a practical use for an average of 25 tons of olive pits reamed out of the delicacies during each day's processing.

"Fireplace logs, cattle feed. You name it. None proved economically practical," says George Powell, executive secretary of the 400-member cooperative.

Finally, research concentrated on a burner developed in Idaho that uses wet wood chips to provide steam heat for lumber mills. A similar burner adapted to handle olive pits, which also have high moisture content, was installed at the Lindsay plant this year.

"It does two things for us," Powell explains. "With increasing costs of fuel, we estimate it will in time supply about 25 per cent of our boiler energy, replacing natural gas or fuel oil.

"A lesser advantage, but still an important one to us, is disposal of these pits. For example, last year we budgeted $15,000 for labor and transportation just to haul the things out of here."

Ashes remaining from all the pits burned in a day fill only about half of one 55-gallon drum, says Leo Roberson, plant engineer.

The hope of getting rid of garbage more cheaply is the main reason Gilroy Foods Inc. is trying to develop a system to use wastes for fuel. The firm now spends about $100,000 annually to dispose of wastes from onion and garlic processing.

Dry skins, roots and tops would be burned to generate steam similar to the operation at Lindsay Olives, says Richard Zahner, engineer for Gilroy Foods.

But some parts of the processing produce wastes too wet to burn. A consultant from San Jose State University developed a method of fermenting the wet wastes to produce methane gas that eventually may be burned in the Gilroy plant's boiler or dehydration process.

"The quality of gas seems to be acceptable, useable for blending in with gas being used here," says Dr. Otto Silverstein, director of research 'nd development.

"We know that the thing will work in concept," Zahner adds. "How practical itis froman operations and financial standpoint is what we are working on now. We can generate a good quantity of methane from it."

A pilot plant may be built to test the practicality of the system which Zahner hopes can eventually consume 85 per cent of the 70 tons of scraps produced each day during the nine-month dehydration season.

Lindsay Olives, the nation's largest processor of that product, wouldn't find burning pits for fuel practical without its large volume, Powell says.

The cooperative handled about 28,000 tons of the 80,000 tons of fresh olives processed in California last year. The Lindsay plant's volume results in 5,000 tons of pits during a 10-month season.

"If we had more pits, we could burn them 24 hours a day," Roberson says.

"It's not going to solve all our fuel problems," Powell adds. "We don't generate enough pits to quite supply all the steam we need, but it is an important savings to us."

Pits are conveyed to a storage bin on a stainless steel flume run by water flow and mechanical elevators. Then they are transported to the new burner by a belt conveyor.

"It is very sensitive equipment," Powell says. "You don't just throw pits in and light a match. The burner is electronically controlled to maintain specific heat."

The pits are burned at temperatures of about 1,400 degrees Fahrenheit to create steam to cool olives in lieu of using the main boiler.

"As long as the pit burner is producing steam, the main boiler backs off," Roberson explains. "The only time the main boiler comes back on line is when we don't have pits to burn."

He notes that one ton of wet olive pits creates steam equivalent to 74.32 therms of natural gas, saving the company about $7.

The burner has met strict Environmental Protection Agency anti-pollution standards, Roberson says.

Powell envisions such applications spreading among crop processors.

"As time goes on with the energy problem we face, I think we're going to see more and more ag wastes used in this manner," he said.

Tribal leader sees S. Africa holocaust

ULUNDI, South Africa (AP) — He is an Uncle Tom to black radicals and a dangerous revolutionary to white conservatives. He preaches nonviolence, but predicts a racial holocaust in South Africa. He says he detests its racial separation policy, but works within it.

The paradoxical Chief Gatsha Buthelezi has emerged from the obscurity of a fragmented black tribal homeland scattered throughout South Africa's predominantly English-speaking Natal Province to become the country's most forceful black nationalist outside detention, restriction or exile.

Political head of the five-million-member Zulu nation, South Africa's largest single ethnic group, Buthelezi described himself in an interview with The Associated Press as a "leader without a country" representing people who are "citizens of nowhere."

The 48-year-old direct descendent of the Zulu royal house exercises his office from Ulundi, where nearly 100 years ago British troops, in tropical heat, crushed the power of the mighty Zulu impis, or tribal regiments, in one of the most bloody battles of colonial history.

Today, Ulundi, 180 miles north of South Africa's biggest port, Durban, boasts a dozen two-story buildings and a few hundred houses. It is the government center of Kwazulu, one of South Africa's nine "homelands," destined under white-run South Africa's separate racial development policy, called apartheid, to join the Transkei as an independent black state.

Buthelezi has changed from a reluctant homeland spokesman to a leader demanding "majority rule" in a single South Africa, where blacks outnumber whites by nearly 5 to 1.

There is an echo of his militant forebears when the soft-spoken, bespectacled Buthelezi describes disunity among South Africa's 18 million blacks as a bigger obstacle to "liberation" than white "intransigence."

"If we were united we could cripple the economy of this country within a week. We could bring whites to their knees within one week," says Buthelezi.

He means, he adds, that a withdrawal of black labor from the South African economy could bring whites to a conference table with blacks to "work out a political dispensation acceptable to all our people."

That dispensation must lead to nothing short of one man, one vote. But he says he envisages a future South Africa with "multiracial majority rule."

"I cannot see any future in which whites are not active participants," he said.

Referring to radical black politicans advocating black rule, he says: "However much people may want us to have a black situation here, the trouble is that truly speaking it is not the same as the rest of Africa, because you have your four million people (whites), most of whom are indigenous, or have become indigenous."

The Portuguese who fled Angola and neighboring Mozambique after 500 years of colonial rule still had a motherland, Buthelezi adds. White South Africans do not.

Two years ago Buthelezi angered the South African government and alarmed white liberals by telling Prime Minister John Vorster blacks have no option but to resort to violence.

In the last year some 500 blacks have died and more than 2,000 have been injured in rioting across the nation.

"It seems to me we are already very much on the brink of disaster," he says. "I mean this is a fact. It is underlined by the events of the past 12 months."

He talks somberly about a race war, an escalation of sporadic violence into a "holocaust."

Assisteens set luncheon

CHARM ADMIRED — Mrs. Jack Worden, right, Assisteen coordinator for the Pomona Valley Assistance League, shows charm to Kathy Shacklett, left, Assisteen president, and Jan Sommers, vice president. Charms will be awarded at May 7 luncheon.

As a contrast to previous years, the Assisteens of Pomona Valley are combining their two annual spring functions into one major event.

They have scheduled a recognition luncheon, honoring graduating seniors, to be held in conjunction with a fashion show. Activities will begin at 11:30 a.m. May 7 at the Arbor Restaurant in Upland.

Following the luncheon, the three graduating seniors will receive Tree of Life charms as a momento of their years of service in Assisteens. Recipients of the charms are Nedra Kayashima, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ben T. Kayashima of Pomona; Kathy Shacklett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Shacklett of Claremont; and Jan Summers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Summers Jr. of Upland.

Mrs. William Bentley of Upland, president of the Assistance League of Pomona Valley, will present the Lorraine Brennan award to the senior who has made the greatest contribution in community, school and Assisteen activities.

Service hours of all of the Assisteens will be recognized, and each member will receive a certificate listing her individual contribution of hours for the past year.

"Images" has been chosen as the theme of the fashion show by the Assisteens, junior high and senior high students, who are daughters and granddaughters of members and associates of the Assistance League of Pomona Valley.

Apparel from Windsor Fashions of the Montclair Plaza will be modeled by Assisteen members including Julie Erickson, Miss Kayashima, Patti Kelly, Heidi Laird, Miss Shacklett, Miss Summers and Shari Taylor.

A unique approach to the fashion show will be given by Jo Ann Firzgibbons, color and fashion consultant, and Bonnie Abbott, interior decorator and owner of Lynlee Designs of Claremont. They will demonstrate how the colors used in fashions and interior design can blend together to compliment the personalities of individuals.

General chairman for the event is Jan Summers. She is being assisted by Patti Kelly, tickets; Julie Erickson, Heidi Laird, Katie McDermott and Noreen Monterastelli, special prizes; and Nedra Kayashima and Susie McDermott, decorations.

Tickets may be purchased from any member of Assisteens. Proceeds from the luncheon and fashion show will benefit the philanthropies of the Assistance League of Pomona Valley. These include the learning Center tutoring program and the Neighborhood Senior Citizens Center.

Mrs. Jack Worden is coordinator of the Assisteens, and she is being assisted with the luncheon and fashion show by Mrs. Summers.

Newly elected Assisteen officers for the ensuing year include Miss Kelly, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James J. Kelly of Claremont, chairman; Miss Taylor, vice chairman; Miss Erickson, treasurer; Pam Walker, secretary; Miss Laird, senior representative; Suzanne Garrison, junior representative; Susan Worden and Martha Whitham, telephone; Julie Kayashima publicity; and Lisa Bookstaver and Katie McDermott, yearbook.

The four Assisteen provisionals, who will become active members include Suzanne Garrison, Julie Kayashima, Noreen Monterastelli, and Martha Whitham.

Several of the Assisteens from Pomona Valley will join over 500 other Assisteens from 33 auxiliaries to attend the tenth assembly of this organization on Saturday.

"Everything's Coming Up Roses" will be the theme of this convention to be held at the Huntington-Sheraton Hotel in Pasadena.

It had Jimmy Carter

Something special about class of '47

ANNAPOLIS (AP) — Even before one of its members moved into the White House, the Naval Academy class of '47 liked to think of itself as something special.

When members of "Forty Seven — Best on the Severn" got together, they bragged about all the admirals and all the successful businessmen their class had produced. Even the class reunion last fall they acclaimed as "the biggest and best class reunion in the history of the Naval Academy."

But a closer examination of the class of '47, which actually finished its tour of duty in 1946 because of the compressed wartime curriculum, shows little to distinguish it from other classes except for its most famous graduate, Jimmy Carter.

The Navy's roster of active duty flag officers published at the beginning of the year listed 26 admirals from the class of '47. But it also listed 26 admirals from the class of '48 and 31 from the class of '49.

Many of Carter's classmates who left the Navy have gone on to successful business careers as presidents, vice presidents and executive officers of large corporations. But the same is true of the other classes which graduated during that same period.

In fact, a list of high-ranking executives compiled by the U.S. Naval Academy Alumni Association contains only about half as many names from the class of '47 as from the classes which graduated one year before it and one year after it.

Retired Capt. William S. Busik, executive director of the association, says he "would be very hesitant to mark one class above another. It's really hard to compare them.

"They all do darn well, and rightfully so. It's what you would expect," he said. "Every class has its own tremendous pride, and they've all done well.

"The only way you can single out the class of '47 is that it generated the first Naval Academy graduate to become president of the United States," Busik said.

The oldest academy faculty member in terms of service is Ellery H. Clark, an associate professor of history who was a young teacher and cross country coach when the class of '47 was winding up its three years at Annapolis.

While he recalls some class members with fondness and respect, he doesn't remember the class of '47 as being any more outstanding than the many others he has seen.

Clark does recall a young man on his cross country team from Georgia named James Earl Carter. "Even at that time I sensed there would be quite a future for the young man," he said.

Goggin airs LNG amendment

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A liquefied natural gas terminal would have to be built offshore if studies show it is needed and can be built in time to meet California's needs, newly proposed legislation says.

Assemblyman Terry Goggin, D-San Bernardino, amended a bill Wednesday that would make it difficult, if not impractical, for gas utilities to build an LNG terminal at Los Angeles Harbor or Oxnard.

Southern California Gas Co. and Pacific Gas & Electric Co. want to import LNG from Indonesia and Alaska in time to head off what they say will be an acute natural gas shortage in 1980-81. They support bills by Sen. Alfred Alquist, D-San Jose, and Assemblyman Robert Dannemeyer, R-Fullerton.

Goggin's bill would effectively slow down the review process for populated areas by giving veto power to all local governments. It would require a decision by the state Coastal Commission by July 1, 1978.

Alquist and Dannemeyer would give sole authority to the state Public Utilities Commission, and require about the same decision deadline.

Goggin said it was his "firm belief" that an offshore terminal, which would be inherently safer to the general population in case of explosion and fire, can be built in time.

He said his bill would allow an LNG plant in a populated area but "only if all of the communities within the danger zone openly and willingly accept the risk of being blown up."

MORE EFFICIENT MOTOR — Engineer Cravens Wanlass shows off a new-type electric motor he says could save one to two million barrels of oil a day. Wanlass, at a Los Angeles news conference, said his "controlled torque" motor uses up to one-third less power than most electric motors.

Oil nations in price accord?

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Venezuelan President Carlos Andre Perez after a visit to Saudi Arabia says obstacles to a uniform oil price have been removed, and the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries will meet in Stockholm July 12 "in complete harmony."

The Saudi government radio said Perez told a news conference in Riyadh, the Saudi capital, that his talks with Crown Prince Fahd had been "extremely fruitful and positive."

The president of OPEC's biggest Latin-American oil producer said an end to the price split in the cartel "does not rest on Saudi Arabia's shoulders alone. It is the combined responsibility of all OPEC members. And I would like to emphasize that my contacts with several leaders of OPEC member countries showed me that OPEC unity remained unscathed."

"In the future, OPEC will have to stick to unanimity. Any questions of disagreement will have to be smoothed over," he declared.

Perez, who has also visited Kuwait and Qatar on a tour of OPEC members in the Middle east, arrived in Tehran today. Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi met him at the airport, and thousands lined the road to the city as they drove by in a royal coach pulled by six white horses.

Led by Iran, 11 of OPEC's 13 members agreed last December on a 10 per cent increase in crude oil prices on Jan. 1 and a 5 per cent hike on July 1. But Saudi Arabia, the cartel's biggest producer, and the United Arab Emirates defied the majority, increased their prices by only 5 per cent and said they would not increase them again in July.

University denies drug caused cancer

CHICAGO (AP) — Drugs given to women during a pregnancy experiment in the early 1950s did not cause their children to contact cancer, the University of Chicago says.

The university and Eli Lilly & Co., a pharmaceutical manufacturer, are being sued for $77 million by three women who charge that they were given the drugs during their pregnancy without their knowledge.

The suit claims the drug DES (diethystilbestrol) caused cancer among the women's offspring, and asks for $70,000 for each woman involved in the experiment and $2 million in punitive damages. The suit said 1,083 women were involved in the experiment at the university's Lying-In Hospital.

The 1950-52 experiment involved 1,640 women — 840 who were given DES and 800 who were given a placebo. The suit says the drug was administered to see whether it would prevent miscarriages.

The university said it began to contact the woman involved in the test after the Food and Drug Administration outlawed DES in 1971.

The university said more than 1,250 babies born during the program have been examined and "No incidents of cancer in the children of the ... study have been detected to date." University Vice President J.R. Bruckner said the followup study is to be completed later this year, he added.

EQUAL HOUSING LENDER

Wealthy Chicago suburbs seeking split from county

CHICAGO (AP) — Some of the wealthiest suburbs of Chicago are mounting a campaign to split away from Cook County, which they say collects their taxes, but denies them proper representation.

Leaders of the secessionist movement say the county, the nation's second most populous, is dominated by Chicago, the country's second largest city, and that suburban residents are paying high tax bills largely to support city services.

To counter this, six townships containing more than a dozen of Chicago's fastest-growing suburban communities, have begun planning a new county, something that hasn't been done in Illinois since 1859.

The county — to be called Lincoln — would cut off what is now the northwest corner of Cook County. Lincoln would be the state's fourth largest county with an estimated 350,000 residents.

State Sen. David Regner, a suburban Republican, has sponsored legislation that would make sucession easier. He says a survey he conducted among 2,000 of his constituents showed 69 per cent in favor of withdrawal, 17 per cent opposed and 14 per cent with no opinion.

The idea of separating suburban towns from the central city is not unique to Cook County. There have also been some efforts, so far unsuccessful, to split off outlying communities of Los Angeles County, the nation's largest in terms of population.

Admittedly a "tongue-in-cheek idea" when it started, the campaign "gets more serious the worse the Cook County government becomes," says Mayor Wendell Jones of Palatine, the guiding force behind the separatist movement.

Jones has prepared a feasibility study on the idea and suburban officials sent it on to the state Department of Local Affairs.

"The enormity of it staggers me," said John Castle, department acting director. "Starting a county from scratch like that. It's just an enormous undertaking."

Before World War II, the northwest suburbs consisted mainly of vegetable farms. Since then, they have experienced dramatic growth, absorbing an influx of relatively affluent white collar workers.

Arlington Heights, for instance, grew from 8,768 residents in 1950 to 64,884 in 1970. Its median family income in 1974 was $24,000, compared with a median of $12,400 in the city.

Currently, suburbs account for almost half of Cook County's total $23.9 billion assessed valuation. They accounted for only a third of the county's total worth a decade ago.

"I think we would be better served, with a more modern approach to government, if we created our own county unit," said Jones.

He said the present county board structure, with 10 Chicago members and six suburban representatives, gives the suburban interests short shrift.

Although the majority of suburban residents are Republicans, "you have the Democratic machine of Chicago controlling the suburbs," Jones said. "It's one-party rule totally, and there seems to be no way out except secession."

George Dunne, Cook County board president and chairman of the county Democratic organization, said he would offer no resistance to the secessionists' proposal "if it's what the people want."

"This is a democracy," he said. "If the people want it, they should have it. I'm not worried about losing (patronage) jobs or anything else."

Mayor James Ryan of Arlington Heights said the idea of seceding "has some merit, but I'm not as optimistic as some others are for its coming to fruition.

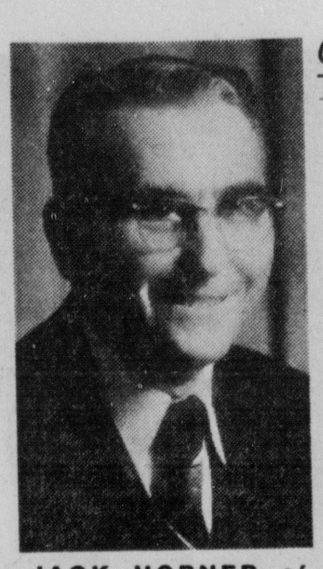

"Before I'd be out front, I'd want a thoughtful, in-depth analysis of what would result," Ryan said. "What's good at one time may not be good for all times."

Jones said the biggest obstacle to secession is the stringent requirements of state law.

The law currently requires the signatures of at least half the registered voters in the area to place the question of secession on the ballot in the 1978 general election, the earliest it could be done.

Then a majority of all persons voting in the election — not just a majority of those voting on the secession issue — is required for approval. This means someone who fails to vote either way on the issue effectively casts a "no" vote.

Regner's bills would reduce the number of petition signatures required to at least 20 per cent and would make approval hinge on the number of persons voting strictly on the issue.

JACK HORNER of Pomona recently observed his 30th anniversary with the Southern California Gas Co. He is a data processing supervisor with the utility in Monterey Park.

Compensation to Debs

County supervisors to challenge ruling

LOS ANGELES (AP) — County supervisors will challenge the granting of $30,000 in workers' compensation to a former supervisor who claimed his damaged heart resulted from the strain of politics.

Ernest Debs, 73, retired as supervisor in 1974 with a $36,000 annual pension after 30 years of city, county and state service. He won workers' compensation last November when a hearing judge ruled that Debs' heart damage resulted from a long political career and granted the former supervisor $70 a week for 479 weeks.

The supervisors voted Tuesday to challenge that decision, primarily in response to publicity on the increasing number of workers' compensation awards. State officials have said that such awards total $1.5 billion a year.

3,500 a day

At the height of European immigration to the United States in 1907, often as many as 3,500 were processed through the Ellis Island immigration station in New York harbor in one day.

Family unplugs TV for a week, discover really didn't miss it

NEW YORK (AP) — I said goodnight to the Bellamy's "Upstairs" and their servants "Downstairs." Then I winked at my television set and pulled the plug.

That was two Sundays ago as my family and I set off on a short and, as it turns out, pretty painless exploration of the way we live.

No television for a week, and we stuck to it.

Since then, the set's been on once — I wanted to see how the local news shows covered the end of the one-week experiment. But don't ask. I fell asleep before I could find out.

It turns out that falling asleep, early and often, was my norm for what might have been a true-life soap opera called "Farewell to the Fonz and All That."

Why did we do it?

A neighbor of ours on Manhattan's West Side is Marie Winn, author of "The Plug-in Drug," which assails the boob tube as a ravager of young minds and destroyer of healthy family life.

She got the PTA of PS 166 interested in trying a no-TV-for-a-week experiment. It was not an exhaustive, scientifically selected sample to yield columns of statistics, but rather a "consciousness-raising" project with children from three or four classes and two dozen or so entire families.

I didn't have a chance: my wife Nancy is on the PTA board, my daughter Nina, 11, is a graduate of the school, my daughter Leah, 8, is a thirdgrader there, and my daughter Sarah, 3, is a prospective member of its kindergarten. Clearly, I would have to kiss the NBA playoffs goodbye.

Not to mention the manna of my soul, late-night movies from Hollywood's golden years of the late 1930s and 40s.

A few ballgames and movies? That's what I told myself, but really that just wasn't so, as I now must admit.

Between a game's end and a movie's opening credits, my little bedside set usually stayed on, and I usually stayed right with it.

Another solid article of faith with me had been that I could never get to sleep unless lulled to unconsciousness by the hypnotically flickering screen.

More rot.

With the set unplugged, I was pulling the covers to my chin at least an hour earlier and dropping off to sleep almost immediately.

Although my wife and I restrict what our children watch, diaries the older girls kept for the week show that even a limited routine of television is a strong influence in their lives.

After returning aching and scraped from an evening of roller skating in Central Park, Nina wrote:

"I HURT! But as soon as I got home I jumped into a long, hot bath. I thought how much more time to do lots more things when there is no TV." And later, "I know that after this week I won't go rushing home or out of a nice bath just to see a TV program."

Another self-revelation: "Today I had a big talk about emotions and respect and all sorts of things like that. I got very upset and I realize this is the time I miss TV the most. All I wanted to do right then was turn on the set and watch for a half hour."

From Leah: "My mother went to a meeting tonight and I usually HATE those times because my father babysits and we get into long fights about what to watch."

Leah interviewed me the second night as a homework assignment on the subject of what the world was like growing up without television, and there was a moment during our quiet talk when I knew she really understood that her father once was a little boy. That felt nice.

One of the activities Nina pursued in lieu of television was writing fan letters. Ironically, and not surprisingly, the first was to Lindsay Wagner, star of "The Bionic Woman," an emphatic no-watch in our home.

FATIGUE STALLS PERILOUS WORK — Oil well troubleshooters Richard Hattenberger, left, and Boot Hansen are covered with grime as they supervise efforts to cap runaway oil well on Phillips Petroleum's Ekofisk Bravo platform in the North Sea. A team of workers is close to capping the six-day flow but quit for the day Wednesday because of fatigue.

ALMOST THE 'HEAD BOY' — Seventeen-year-old Mary Pughes smiles as she talks with other students at Holy Family High School in Denver after her bid for election as "head boy" was stalled. The 192 boys in the school decided that the "head boy" should be just that. So despite a tie in the election, and the fact that girls outnumber boys in the school 3 to 2, her name was taken off the runoff ballot.

But it turns out these are character traits that didn't come naturally. Like Ann, Bonnie is a divorcee who had to learn to cope without a man around. She talks frankly this week about her sheltered upbringing, her early broken marriage and making it in show business all on her own. And why she thinks that once you know what you want, nothing can stop you.

CONSERVATION Cindy Hamme, a senior control clerk, prepares to run a computer for Southern California Edison Co.'s new computer-assisted conservation program called Sure Actions for Valuable Energy Savings (SAVES). Customers who submit home appliance and other energy use information will receive a computer-prepared letter suggesting specific ideas of conservation.

Computer-assisted program aids consumer conservation

A large-scale computer-assisted program to help thousands of consumers save more electricity in their homes has been launched by the Southern California Edison Co.

Edward A. Myers Jr., Edison vice president, said that under the new program, electric customers who submit home appliance and other energy use information will receive a computer-prepared letter containing specific ideas for conservation.

Officially titled, "Sure Actions for Valuable Energy Savings" (SAVES), the conservation program is being implemented throughout Edison service areas in Central and Southern California.

"With the cooperation of a large percentage of our 2.5 million residential customers, the SAVES project has the potential of saving millions of kilowatt-hours of electricity every year," Myers said.

Edison computer systems will produce personally-tailored possible energy-saving actions for the consideration of individual consumers responding to electrical-use questionnaires, he added.

He reported computer forms are available to customers at Edison's local offices.

Eventually, the utility plans to mail the questionnaire to all residential customers.

Myers said the SAVES project is the latest in a series of on-going conservation programs which the utility began in the early 1970s.

"The nation's and California's energy problems are very real, and our customers most certainly should continue the conservation ethic and reduce comsumption of all forms of energy.

"We believe the SAVES project will definitely carry the conservation message to the doorstep of every residential customer in our service area," Myers said.

He explained the questionnaire for the computer invites customers to answer a variety of energy use questions, such as numbers and types of electric appliances, and the size of their homes.

Edison's conservation-programmed computers will examine each customer's submitted data and print out a letter suggesting potential actions for energy savings in that particular home.

He reported the utility has a goal of conducting computer analysis of electric use in 250,000 homes during the first 12 months of the SAVES project.

BSU holding benefit cage game

By ANNE NIELSEN
Pomona Correspondent

Friday night will be a busy night for Pomona High School.

The Black Students Union (BSU) is holding a benefit basketball game in the gym. The faculty will play the Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity from Cal State L.A.

Money raised at the game will go into a scholarship fund.

Admission is 75 cents. Students with ASB cards will be charged 50 cents.

Pomona High also will hold its first Pop Concert Friday night. It will be held at 7:30 in the Education Center auditorium, 800 S. Garey Ave.

The concert will feature the school Jazz Band, Chamber Singers and Madrigals. A jazz dance group and soloists also will perform.

Cockroach collector

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — Bruce Hammock has a lot of cockroaches around him: some 500 Madagascar and Panamanian cockroaches measuring up to three inches.

Hammock, 27, an insect endocrinologist at the University of California here, has been studying cockroaches for the past eight years.

He is working with juvenile hormones of cockroaches, and is trying to come up with a synthetic material that would replace insecticides like DDT.

The synthetic hormone would be something like a birth control pill for cockroaches and other insects, he said.

"These giant roaches are permitted to be imported into the United States solely for research purposes," Hammock said.

Carter: a change in foreign policy

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is not only changing the way American foreign policy is conducted. He is changing the policy itself.

The most obvious examples are Soviet affairs and the Middle East.

Carter's unorthodox style is to enunciate in public his outline of an arms agreement and an Arab-Israeli settlement.

His policy is to go beyond limitations to disarmament itself and to support a "homeland" for the Palestinians, along with "defensible borders" for Israel.

Both in his approach to the Russians and the Middle East, the President is sweeping away a cautious diplomacy employed by the last two administrations. Plugging away, that measured method produced partial arms and peace accords.

He wants the Russians either to permit continued development of the potent American cruise missile or to agree to terms that would hit hardest at their land-based missile force.

And he wants the Arabs and Israelis to sit down together in Geneva before the end of the year and work out a lasting solution that provides a "homeland" for the Palestinians, secure borders for Israel and real peace.

No step-by-step diplomacy for this President.

Actually, Carter's campaign gave little hint of so ambitious a foreign policy program.

Overseas, he emphasized human rights, which have become a hallmark of his policy.

There were some signs of the "hang-tough" attitude he has taken toward the Russians and none that he would champion the Palestinian cause. In fact, Carter attacked former President Gerald R. Ford for making Israel "a scapegoat."

His populism, tinged with religious moralism, foreshadowed his style, however.

It's as if Carter is taking periodic polls on foreign policy:

Do you want disarmament? Are the Palestinians entitled to a state?

With it all, there is a downplaying of the experts who advise him, even sometimes of the perils at hand.

There is no reason, the President says, to get upset "every time Brezhnev sneezes."

Almost daily, one press account or another is dismissed as wrong or even "fiction," suggesting only direct communication with the people can be trusted.

As for the experts, Ambassador Andrew Young dealt with them this way last week in a speech at the State Department:

"I guess I am very suspicious of all kinds of experts. But that doesn't mean I don't listen to experts.

"It just means that experts should never have the final answer in a democracy — that the final answer should rest with the American people."

MISSES HOME — Great train robber Ronald Biggs speaks on BBC television via satellite from Brazil. He said he deserved a royal pardon because he had not done anything dishonest since his jailbreak 12 years ago. Biggs said that although he considers Brazil his home, he hoped some day to travel freely in Britain.

Mom's Day history set

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Mother's Day, first observed here in 1908, has origins going back to the ancient Greeks.

According to Hallmark researcher Sally Hopkins, a spring festival was held annually in Greece and Asia Minor honoring Cybele, goddess of nature and motherhood. This custom spread to Rome about 250 B.C. as the festival of Hilaria. The three-day period of dancing and feasting began on the Ides of March.

Nowadays Mother's Day is celebrated not only in the United States but in Austria, Canada, Mexico, China, Japan, the West Indies, parts of Africa and in most South and Central American countries. To mark the occasion, Americans are expected to send more than 200 million Mother's Day cards this year.

Family unplugs TV for a week

Nancy observed with satisfaction that Sarah played by herself more when her mother stopped relying on "Sesame Street" to distract the 3-year-old.

However, I'm not so sure that Sarah's watching the show isn't worth it. Learning the alphabet, numbers and how to actively follow an entertainment for an hour — she talks back to the screen — are benefits not to be despised.

Sarah spoke volumes about this experiment in her own way. It was a song she simply made up, acknowledging symbolically that she was not watching television and that her life would still go on. It's title, verse and chorus all are the same three words — "Sesame Street Teenager."

As my wife put it, "We were not the typical TV family that needed to be reached. The older girls' lives were not changed drastically. They missed a few shows and a few fights.

"I am sorry about the degree to which I encouraged 'Sesame Street,' ... a wonderful show but I think I placed too much importance on the watching of it, and that came out of laziness. I will make every effort never to stop any playtime because it's time for a TV program."

As for me, now I know the enemy and how he works. The enemy is me, and he kids himself that he's watching junk to kill some time, when the truth is that he is killing his time by watching junk.

He'd better watch out from now on.

Report raps armed forces of Israel

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The state comptroller published a scathing report Wednesday accusing Israel's armed forced of wasting hundreds of thousands of dollars, slack reserve-callup procedures and poor maintenance of vital equipment.

The report's findings indicated that many of the shortcomings found to have contributed to Israel's unreadiness for the 1973 October war apparently had not been corrected, and observers said it could have an impact on national elections scheduled for May.

The comptroller's report said emergency stores of vehicles in the Central and Southern Brigades were poorly maintained, ammunition was mislaid and weapons and spare parts were missing.

Air force commanders had wasted at least 245,000 Israeli pounds (about $24,500) using air force training jets for private trips, the comptroller alleged.

Procedures for calling up Israel's reserve forces, the backbone of its manpower, were found lacking. In one exercise, the comptroller found that less than half the reservists had answered the callup order.

"The findings raised here are serious and point to the need to examine in depth the current system of command," the report concluded. "It is necessary for the central military command to check whether these findings are characteristic in other brigades as well."

The report also criticized state treasury operations, government bureaucracy and other issues. It was submitted to the Knesset for review, but the parliament has ended its session for the year.

However, the Likud conservative opposition coalition called for a special session to discuss the report. "The findings are extremely serious, and bear out our claim that the Labor party government is not performing its function," said a Likud spokesman.

The English-language Jerusalem Post, recalling that streamlining the military was one of the country's top priorities following the 1973 Mideast war, wrote in an editorial: "The tale of waste, inefficiency and mismanagement disclosed by the comptroller would make it appear as if the last war never took place at all."

Prime Minister Golda Meir was forced to resign after public outcry accused the government of failing to prepare the army for the Egyptian attack in 1973.

Reagan shades Brown as best known politician in state

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Former Governor Ronald Reagan is the best known politician in the state, with Governor Edmund G. Brown Jr. close behind, according to a new survey by pollster Mervin Field.

In the California Poll released Wednesday, Field said he wasn't just idly dropping names when he asked 962 Californians who they recognized from a list of 16 politicians.

Field said the poll was aimed at testing the waters in anticipation of state elections in 1978.

"Public identification, or 'I.D.', is the name of the game for those who seek political office these days," he said.

The face-to-face survey, conducted in March, assessed the name recognition of 16 people believed to be interested in political office next year.

Of the cross-section of adults polled, 96 per cent said they knew "something about" Reagan and 93 per cent said the same of Brown.

But more adults were found to have "unfavorable" views toward Reagan than any other, with 34 per cent turning thumbs down.

Others with high identification included first-term Republican U.S. Sen. S.I. Hayakawa, 79 per cent; Democratic U.S. Sen. Alan Cranston, 68 per cent; and state Treasurer Jesse Unruh, 61 per cent.

Of the top Republican contenders vying for the governorship, 67 per cent said they knew something about state Atty. Gen. Evelle Younger. Los Angeles Police Chief Edward Davis was known by 34 per cent and San Diego Mayor Pete Wilson by 15 per cent. Least known of the 16 politicians was Dixon Arnett, Field said. The poll found that 4 per cent knew about the San Mateo County assemblyman and 85 per cent did not or were neutral.

The poll also included questions measuring the "degree of favorability" toward the politicos. Respondents were shown a card which identified the person and asked to register opinions from strongly favorable to strongly unfavorable.

Hayakawa took the honors, with 72 per cent of those polled expressing "favorable" opinions. Brown was second with 69 per cent, and Younger next with 66 per cent.

Favorable opinions towards Reagan were expressed by 59 per cent of the survey.

California joins suits against GM

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — California has joined the parade to the courts in the latest of a barrage of suits against General Motors for using Chevrolet engines in other GM cars.

In a $20 million suit filed Tuesday by the state Department of Consumer Affairs and the San Francisco district attorney's office, GM was chided for what was termed "the Great Engine Switch."

The state attorney general filed a similar action in Los Angeles.

Officials said the suits would probably be consolidated with a deluge of consumer complaints and state legal actions that challenge GM for placing Chevrolet engines in Buicks, Oldsmobiles and Pontiacs.

A GM press release Tuesday said, "We regret that this suit has been filed. We believe it is unwarranted and we will defend it in the courts."

The suit came just one day after General Motors announced a settlement that would allow the owner of a 1977 Buick, Oldsmobile or Pontiac with a Chevrolet engine the option of trading the car for a new model or keeping it with a 36,000 mile, 36-month engine warranty.

GM said owners who decide to trade would be charged eight cents for each mile driven on the original car.

The suit filed in Superior Court here seeks to compel GM to make a full refund to those who want to void the deal and not be allowed the eight-cents-a-mile discount.

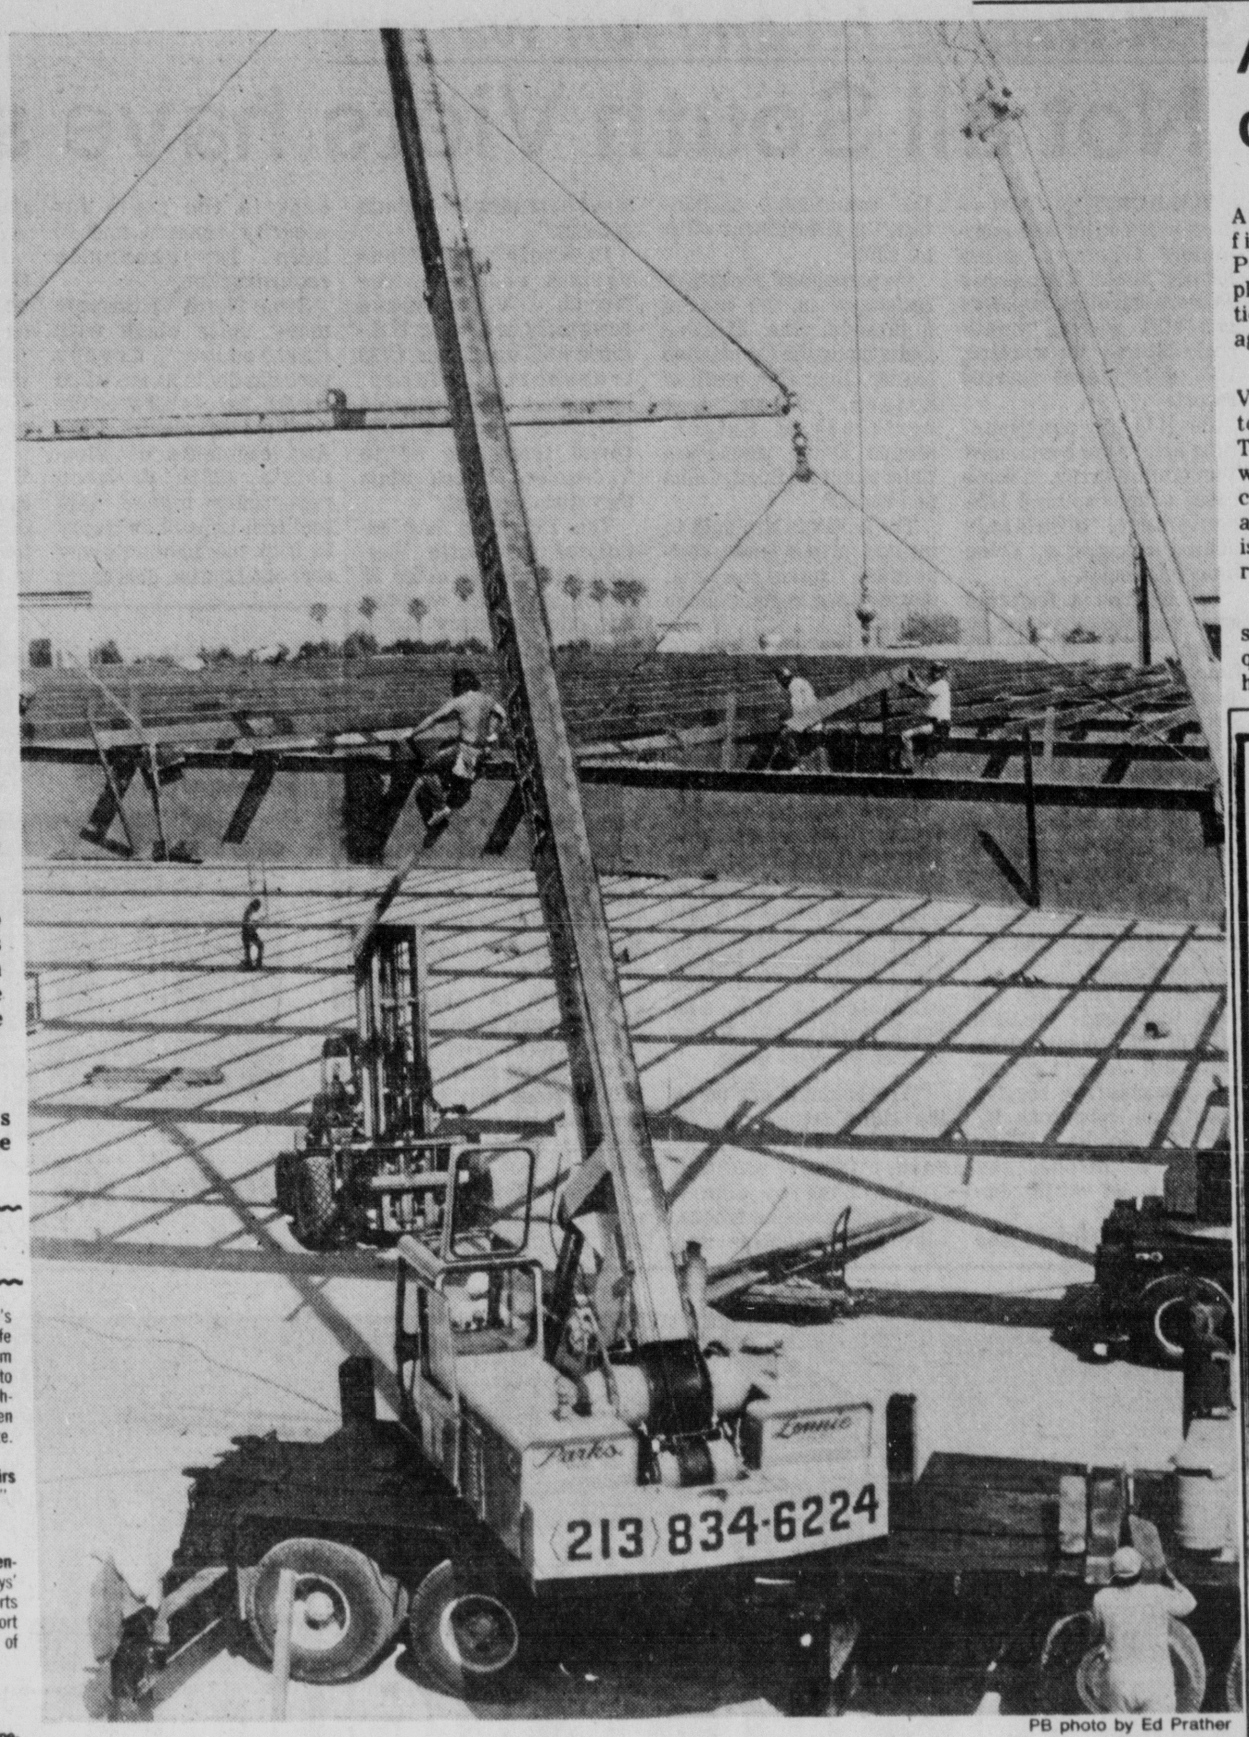

It asks that GM be prohibited from selling any more of the hybrid autos in California. About 8,000 of the cars were brought to the state and about half of those have been sold.

The damages sought would not go to owners, but would be treated as penalties to be paid to various public agencies.

The Los Angeles suit, filed on behalf of those who bought the cars, accuses GM of unfair competition and advertising because GM did not disclose the engine exchange.

CONSTRUCTION STARTS — Workmen straddle the giant steel beams of a new stock barn being built at the Los Angeles County Fairgrounds. Below is one of two cranes that lifted each of the 220-feet long beams into place.

Attorney accused of illegal tactics

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A state senator is accusing filmmaker Roman Polanski's attorney of planning to use illegal tactics in defending Polanski against a rape charge.

Sen. Alan Robbins, D-Van Nuys, criticized attorney Douglas Dalton Tuesday for saying he wanted to bring out in court the sexual history of a 13-year-old girl Polanski is accused of drugging and raping.

Robbins contended in a statement that such an inquiry would violate a law he authored which prevents questions about an alleged rape victim's sex life unless the judge decides they challenge the victim's credibility.

"This is obviously a fishing expedition designed to scare this girl away from offering testimony in open court," Robbins said. "It is not only wrong morally, but it flies directly in the face of the intent of the Robbins rape evidence law."

Dalton could not be reached for comment, but he was quoted last week as saying that he planned to attack the girl's credibility.

Huge building for county fair

A huge steel structure that will house animal exhibits is under construction at the Los Angeles County Fairgrounds in Pomona.

The building, one of the largest of its type in the world, has no interior supporting columns. Each of the steel beams spanning the 220-feet width of the building is supported at each end only. The building is 300 feet long.

Two cranes were needed to lift each beam, weighing more than 12 tons, into place.

Major portions of the construction will be completed by next month, and full preparation of the building will be completed before the start of the fair in September.

During the fair about half the building will be used for the display of horses, with the other half designated for exhibits of sheep and goats.

The building, located just off of White Avenue, replaces the temporary stock barns that had been in use since 1948.

Sonny Wilkinson, fair superintendent, said the building will serve many other purposes during the remainder of the year.

"We're hoping for big things out of it throughout the year," he said, naming car shows, horse shows and similar activities that could be staged there.

The building has 66,000 square feet and will cost about $600,000. The project is being financed by the Fair Association.

Eskimos tell the 'judge'

NEW YORK (AP) — A proposed 2,625-mile, $12 billion natural gas pipeline from Alaska and the Mackenzie River Delta down through canada and into the northern United States has spurred an intensive environmental impact inquiry headed by Justice Thomas R. Berger of the British Columbia Supreme Court.

Justice Berger has carried his inquiry to remote Indian and Eskimo villages and encouraged witnesses to speak informally in their own languages, reports The Compass, a publication of MOAC, a commercial marine insurer.

"In a preliminary finding," the publication notes, "Justice Berger said some natives welcome a chance to join a normal wage economy, but others feared alcoholism, the devastation of the land and the loss of their collective identity as a people."

Still waging hit-and-run warfare

Not all South Viets have surrendered

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two years after the communist takeover, some former South Vietnamese soldiers and other resisters are still waging small-scale hit-and-run warfare, U.S. government sources report.

But it is only a matter of time before the communist Vietnamese army, in some cases using captured U.S. equipment, eliminates armed resistance, these sources predict.

"It will be a festering sore for some years to come," said one U.S. official. "But it will fade away eventually. The resistance is uncoordinated and has no outside source of resupply."

The resisters apparently are getting little active support from the general South Vietnamese population, which is described as submissive but resentful of the northerners, "who act like conquerors."

It was two years ago this week that South Vietnam fell, but U.S. specialists on Southeast Asia indicate they continue to receive reports on conditions inside the country. They decline to discuss the sources of this information.

"Resistance still plagues the communist authorities," a government official said.

He pinpointed pockets of resistance in the central highlands, the Mekong Delta along the Cambodian border, Bien Hoa north of Saigon, Xuan Loc northeast of Saigon, around Dalat, and Phan Thiet along the South China Sea coast.

The holdouts are said to include former South Vietnamese paratroopers, marines and regular army soldiers.

Members of the militant Cao Dai sect and Montagnard tribesmen also are reported to be giving the North Vietnamese army trouble.

There are no reliable figures on resistance strength, officials say, but their activity is enough to force the North Vietnamese to carry out counterinsurgency sweeps reminiscent of those once conducted by U.S. and South Vietnamese forces against the Viet Cong.

"The holdouts are doing the same things the VC used to do," a U.S. expert said. "They ambush trucks, blow up ammunition and gasoline stocks, take food supplies and stage harassing hit-and-run attacks."

In their operations against resisters, the North Vietnamese reportedly are using U.S.-made F5E warplanes, C130 transport planes, helicopters and armored personnel carriers captured from the South Vietnamese forces when they disintegrated.

The Pentagon has estimated the North Vietnamese collected about $2 billion in useable weapons and other military equipment from the South Vietnamese two years ago. But U.S. specialists believe much of this no longer is effective because of lack of spare parts.

American government authorities say they have seen no evidence to support claims by some Southeast Asian nations that the communist Vietnamese have been funneling captured weapons to communist insurgents in Thailand, Malaysia and Indonesia.

The North Vietnamese army has not demobilized, U.S. sources say, but has remained at full wartime strength of 24 to 25 divisions.

A few divisions have returned north, the sources say, but most have been kept in the south for security reasons and to help in economic reconstruction.

Some North Vietnamese army units clash with Cambodian troops periodically in an unsettled border dispute between the one-time communist allies. And elements of Vietnam's 325th division reportedly moved into southern Laos in February to help the Laotian army root out Laotian dissidents and South Vietnamese army holdouts.

In Saigon and elsewhere the new rulers are said to be "tightening the screws" on activities of potential political dissidents among the Buddhists, Roman Catholics and members of the Hoa Hoa religious sect.

Some 50,000 South Vietnamese, mostly civilian officials and military officers of the defeated regime, are being held in "re-education camps," U.S. sources estimate.

"We believe some of them will be there until they die," a U.S. official said.

The exodus of South Vietnamese in fishing boats and other craft has been reduced to a trickle, reports indicate, largely because the communist government is strictly limiting the availability of gasoline for motorized vessels.

Halos could use Charlie Finley

Randy Stein battles Birds

There has been so much written and said about baseball's new ecomonics and how the new free agent situation will wreck the game.

While there is no question about how many of the players are now being grossly overpaid, there is also another side of the question which has largely gone unnoticed.

Pomona's Randy Stein is a good example.

The Ganesha High product has spent seven seasons working up in the Baltimore Orioles' system only to see his hopes of making the big club dashed again this spring.

But the Orioles didn't return the righthanded pitcher to their Triple-A farm club at Rochester in the International League.

Instead, the Birds shipped Stein and outfielder Mike Dimmel all the way down to their Miami farm club in the Single-A Florida State League.

Why?

Because of the free agent situation.

Stein and Dimmel, frustrated about not making the Orioles' roster, told the club they wouldn't sign contracts this season to become free agents next winter.

So the Orioles elected to banish them to Single-A ball since Siberia isn't available.

Thanks to Player Periscope, the service which provides the PB and many other newspapers with weekly statistics of local players in the minor leagues, we have a good report of the controversy.

Stein and Dimmel have filed a grievance through the Major League Players' Association.

"I told Hank Peters (Baltimore general manager) that if I didn't make the Orioles this year, I wouldn't sign," Stein said. "It has nothing to do with money. I just want to try to make it with some organization.

"My point is if I meant nothing to this organization, why don't they just release me? Even if they don't pitch me, there's absolutely nothing I can do about it. It's legal to play out your option, but they're putting pressure on us."

Easy to understand

It's easy to understand Stein's frustration.

Now 24, he can see some of his best earning years being wasted in the minors when he could have a good shot at making a major league roster with an expansion team or another club.

There definitely should be a limit of years a major league club can keep a player in the minors.

Baltimore has taken its approach because of the sting of losing Reggie Jackson, Bobby Grich and Wayne Garland through the free agent thing last winter.

"We had a bad situation last year, and we're not going to let it happen again," says Clyde Kluttz, the Orioles' Director of Player Development. "They have the right to play out their options. But by the same token, if I put them in Triple A (Rochester), I've got to knock two guys off the roster who we think are prospects. I can't do that, knowing these guys will walk off at the end of the season."

Stein replies with that argument by saying, "If I can't take up a place on a Triple-A roster, why am I taking up a spot on the Miami roster? These kids are the players of the future, and they represent Baltimore's future, too."

Bandit players

Stein and Dimmel, who was drafted by the Orioles from the Dodgers' organization, have earned the nickname, The Bandit Players.

This was Stein's fourth spring training with the Orioles. He has pitched at Rochester for four seasons, slipping to 5-6 with a 5.60 earned run average after an 8-2 campaign in 1975 with a 3.11 ERA.

"When they sent me down to the minor league camp, manager Earl Weaver told me not to worry about my contract, that they wouldn't mess with me and to have a good year. The next thing I know I go from pitching for Rochester, to the bullpen, to nothing."

Paul Moskau, the former Azusa Pacific star pitcher and hitter, may soon be up with the Reds.

Moskau started his Triple-A career with Indianapolis in the American Association by hitting a two-run homer and a run-producing single in the season opening 5-2 win over Iowa.

His single scored Jack Maloof, the former Mt. San Antonio College and La Verne College star.

Maloof was obtained from the Minnesota Twins by the Reds just before the season started.

Moskau enjoyed a banner season at Three Rivers in the Double-A Eastern League last year with a 13-6 record and a dazzling 1.55 ERA.

It's doubtful if any manager would ever need a pinch-hitter for him.

ANAHEIM — Too bad Gene Autry can't replace the entire lot of Angel scouts with Charlie Finley.

Whatever else he may be, Finley always seems to be able to find good baseball players.

Latest to assert himself is rookie pitcher Rick Langford, another of the "unknowns" Finley got from the Pittsburgh Pirates in the Phil Garner deal.

Former Poly star Mitchell Page was the first of the group to make his presence known. Wednesday night Langford was the star of Oakland's 7-5 win over the helpless Halos.

The 25-year-old Langford checked the hard-hitting Angels on one run (unearned) and six hits in seven innings after the Halos had jumped on starter Jim Umbarger for four runs in one-plus innings.

Langford struck out eight and walked only two in picking up his second major league victory, both over the Halos.

Two people have helped him a lot, the youngster told writers. The first is (surprise) Larry Sherry, brother of Angels manager Norm Sherry, and the other is teammate Dave Giusti who came along with Page and Langford in the Garner deal.

Larry Sherry, now Pirates' pitching coach, was the Bucs' minor league pitching coach last year when Langford posted a 9-5 record at Charleston in the International League.

"Larry helped me a lot," said Langford. "Dave (Giusti) is just a super guy. He gives me tips such as not to burn myself out throwing in the bullpen, to watch the game to learn and anticipate the flow.

"Although I'd rather be a starter, I'll do anything I can. Jack (McKeon, A's' manager) told me I'll be used in both long and short relief. That suits me. I want to pitch as much as possible.

Langford already pitched too much as far as the Halos are concerned. While he excelled, Angel pitching floundered again

Starter Paul Hartzell (1-2) was presented with a 5-0 lead in the first two innings and couldn't hold it.

Hartzell was tagged for four runs on four hits in the third inning. He got through the fourth but lost the lead and the game in the fifth on Page's single and Manny Sanguillen's first American League home run.

Gary Ross made his first relief appearance and gave up a homer to Earl Williams in the seventh.

"We got to get our pitching going again," sighed Sherry. "I can't believe it won't get better. Hartzell was throwing well. Sanguillen hit a pitch that was over his head."

Brightest spot for the Halos, aside from the 10-hit attack, was a hitless two-inning stint by Don Kirkwood who retired all six hitters he faced.

But the damage had already been done and Kirkwood brought a stratospheric 8.44 earned run average with him.

The Angels got a run in the first on a walk to Jerry Remy, Bobby Grich's single, a sacrifice and Bobby Bonds' sacrifice fly.

They got the other four in the second on a two-run homer by designated hitter Ron Jackson, a walk, Remy's single and a double by Grich.

Andy Etchebarren, who went in to catch the ninth inning, was hit in the back of the head when Page swung hard and had his right hand slip off the bat.

Etchebarren went down like he had been shot and was removed on a stretcher and taken to the hospital. The only report was that he was conscious as he left the field.

The injury at least temporarily caused the Halos to cancel a player switch between Anaheim and Salt Lake City.

The loss dropped the Angels four games below .500 at 8-12 and knocked them under the .500 mark for the homestand with a 5-6 mark.

ANGEL ANGLES — The Halos departed for Baltimore and a 10-game road trip today. They'll also visit New York, Boston and Kansas City.

Road games slated for TV are Friday night and Sunday in Baltimore and the following Friday, Saturday and Sunday in Boston.

The Angels already have hit 16 home runs at home. They had only 24 in Anaheim all last season. Jackson's homer was the club's 25th of the season. Last year number 25 didn't come until game 89.

Cal Poly coach John Scolinos and the 1977 Broncos were at the game and welcomed on the message board.

Scolinos saw Page get a hit and two walks. Page left Anaheim with a .368 batting average and a modest six-game hitting streak and 18 runs batted in in 19 games. He leads the league in total bases (49) and is second in hits (27) and doubles (8). He has hit safely in 15 games.

Schein expected success

By MIKE BROSSART
PB Staff Writer

Donna Schein, coach of the Upland High girls' basketball team, isn't the least bit surprised to find her squad in Friday night's CIF 3A championship game at Cal State Fullerton.

"I've been looking for this for three or four years," she said matter-of-factly Wednesday afternoon.

"The first year the CIF had a girls' championship (1974), we made it to the semifinals," Schein said. Upland got as far as the quarterfinals the last two years.

"So we've been knocking on the door for some time," Schein continued. "Even the games where we got knocked off in past years were always close."

Upland (20-4) will meet Righetti (19-4) Friday at 6:30 p.m. for the 3A crown. That game will be followed by the 4A title contest between St. Joseph (23-3) and Huntington Beach (21-1) at 8 p.m. The 2A game between Brawley (19-5) and Bishop Diego (16-4) will be played at another site, Imperial College, at 8 p.m. Friday.

"I think our hardest game was last week when we beat Santa Maria," Schein said, adding, "Of course, I'm not taking Righetti lightly."

Upland earned a 64-62 decision over Santa Maria, a team that twice beat Righetti during Northern League play.

"Santa Maria had four players we really had to watch," Schein said. "Righetti only has two or three really good players."

Righetti's top performer is 5-foot-9 freshman Kendee Eulert, a freshman forward who averages 17 points and 12 rebounds per game.

"Our main objective will be to stop Eulert," said Schein, who feels she has a team that can do it.

Upland is led by Carol Moser, a 5-8 junior forward, and Nan Fowler, a 5-4 sophomore point guard. Moser has averaged 18.8 points over four playoff games and Fowler has averaged 14.5.

The three remaining Highlander starters are all seniors — 5-10 center Linda McKeon (8.8 points per game), 5-8 forward Patty Kuchan (seven points and nine rebounds per game) and 5-6 guard Becky Kelber (five assists per game).

Lisa Fisher, a 5-9 senior center, and Sharon Sanchez, a junior guard, are the first two Upland players off the bench.

Upland has a couple of impressive streaks going — nine consecutive San Antonio League titles and 65 straight league wins, a CIF record. The Highlanders have dominated girls' basketball locally since it was elevated from an afterschool playtime status.

"I think the winning tradition is what keeps our program strong," said Joanne Dixon, girls' athletic director at Upland. "Kids want to play here because we have a reputation for doing well.

"It's not because we force them to, but it seems that 90 per cent of our basketball players go to summer camps and play in summer leagues."

Dixon also noted that the Upland players began their own running and conditioning program — independent of their coaches — as early as last November.

"We have players and coaches who are willing to work hard," Dixon said, "and that's what it takes to have a successful program."

Schein is definitely a hard-working coach. A physical education teacher at Upland Jr. High, she coaches the girls' basketball team at the junior high school as well as at the high school. She generally coaches the junior high schoolers in the afternoon and the Highlanders at night until 9 or 9:30, leaving her little free time.

"I'll be glad when the season's over," Schein said, only half joking.

Dixon coaches Upland's junior varsity team and assists Schein with the varsity. She credits Upland's playing in the Garden Grove Tournament early in the season with preparing the Highlanders for CIF postseason play.

"That's the best tournament in the area," said Dixon. "We beat St. Joseph by two there, and they're in the 4A finals. We also beat Louisville, which was ranked No. 2 in the 4A, and lost to No. 3 Mater Dei."

Tickets for Friday's finals, good for both the 3A and 4A games, are available at Upland High at $2 for adults or $1 for children or students. A rooters' bus will leave Upland at 5 p.m. and return after the 3A game. Charge for the bus ride is $1.

HAPPY EAGLE

Former Rams quarterback Ron Jaworski smiles and holds daughter Joleen. Jaworski's series of five one-year contracts with the Eagles are said to be worth $1 million.

Cey appears certain to break RBI record

SAN DIEGO (AP)—Ron Cey etched his name in the record book alongside Willie Stargell and Reggie Jackson, but Dodger manager Tommy Lasorda doesn't think Cey will be there with them much longer.

"There's no question in my mind Cey will break the record," said Lasorda after Cey drove in two more runs with a homer and a single Wednesday night to tie the major league mark of 27 RBI for the month of April.

The Dodgers posted a 7-6 victory over the San Diego Padres, their third straight in a four-game series that ends tonight.

Cey, who increased his batting average to .469 and his home run total to eight during yet another big night, said he wasn't aware that he equaled the April RBI mark first set by Stargell in 1971 and then tied by Jackson in 1974.

"If I'd have known about it, I probably wouldn't have been able to do it," said Cey. "But this is the result of everyone else's success on this club, and I honestly mean that. There are men on base every time I'm up there, it seems, and that makes my job much easier."

Cey's job is driving in runs as the Dodgers' cleanup hitter and he now has three more games left before April bows out and a good crack at setting an all-time record.

Along with Cey's two hits, including his fourth homer in as many games, Dusty Baker added a two-run homer and Bill Russell collected four hits to send the Padres reeling to a fourth consecutive loss.

Dave Winfield and George Hendrick both clouted two-run homers for the Padres, who rallied for four runs in the eighth inning. But it wasn't enough as Doug Rau and Charlie Hough held them off, combining for an eight-hitter.

Vermeil expects Jaworski to make Eagles a winner

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Eagles have been promising for years to turn around a woebegone program that has produced only one winning season in the last 15 years. The newest hope is Ron Jaworski.

Words of optimism were spouted when the National Football League team brought in quarterback Roman Gabriel, middle linebacker Bill Bergey and Dick Vermeil, the latest in a steady succession of coaches.

The pep talk was heard again Wednesday when Jaworski, known as "The Polish Rifle" when he was with the Los Angeles Rams, signed a series of five one-year contracts. Terms were not disclosed.

"I'm accepting this challenge because I know it can be done. The direction is right," said the four-year veteran, the Rams second-round draft choice in 1973.

"I know I can play. I have confidence in my ability. I think I can be the type of quarterback the other players here can rally around," added the strong-armed 6-foot-2, 185-pounder.

The Eagles have an up-in-the-air quarterback situation. Gabriel has had five knee operations and is a 16-year veteran. Young Mike Boryla, who started the first 10 games of last year's 4-10 season, is unhappy and his desire to be traded is being worked on.

The Eagles have traded away their top round draft choices through 1978 to bring in other veterans. So Vermeil asked owner Leonard Tose to deal the rights to tight end Charles Young, also playing out his option, for Jaworski's rights.

"He's the best player we could get without having to wait three or four years for the draft," Vermeil said.

"No one player can turn a program around. In Los Angeles, the team could win in spite of the quarterback. In Philadelphia, we have to win because of him," the coach said.

"He's a winner, a leader. He gets people excited. Jaworski has that emotional spark that quarterbacks need," Vermeil added.

"Before you can win, you have to believe you can win. I think I've pretty much developed all the basic things a quarterback needs to develop," said Jaworski, whose enthusiasm bubbles over.

Jaworski has started nine games for the Rams in four seasons. He won all nine.

He had the starting job won last season but injured a shoulder in the opening game. He started only one other game last year as the Rams went with James Harris and rookie Pat Haden.

In his NFL career, he has completed 54 passes in 124 attempts for 719 yards and one touchdowns. He has thrown nine interceptions.

"I really believe I'm a big play quarterback. I'm not going to go for five yards when I can go for six points. If I see the blitz coming and they're trying to take something away, I'll go to something else," said Jaworski, who lunched on smoked Polish sausage and pigs-in-the-blanket served at a press luncheon.

"I love the game. When I get out on the field, I kind of forget everything else," he added.

Miller Award to 'Hens' Busterud

Pomona-Pitzer shortstop Jim Busterud is the latest recipient of the Miller Sports Award as California College Athlete of the Week.

Busterud went 8-for-12 last week and raised his average to .447 for 21 games. He had two home runs, batted in seven runs, scored five and stole four bases.

Busterud was the Sagehens' third baseman until a back problem forced Greg Holden to abandon the shortstop position. Busterud has established himself there and already has filled the hole anticipated next year because Holden graduates in June.

Dionne hopes Kings will deal

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Believe me, the Kings did well this season," Marcel Dionne said. "But other teams will be better next year and if we don't make some changes, we'll be in trouble."

The Los Angeles winger received a $10,000 check Wednesday as the "most consistent and productive" National Hockey League player, then talked about the Kings' prospects.

"It's great to get this award," said Dionne, who established a number of Los Angeles records this season. "But I'd rather we were still playing hockey."

Dionne had 53 goals and 69 assists this season for 122 points — all club marks — and tacked on five goals and nine assists in the playoffs against Atlanta and Boston before the Bruins eliminated the Kings 4-2 last week.

There have been rumors flying since the Kings were knocked out of the Stanley Cup playoffs that many changes will be made before next season. Included in the talk are possible trades, and the future of Los Angeles Coach Bob Pulford.

Kings owner Jack Kent Cooke has beckoned the club brass to Las Vegas for a meeting which will presumably lay the framework for next season.

The feeling is that Pulford, reportedly being courted by Detroit and Toronto, will return as coach, and that trades involving a great deal of cash will be made to acquire the services of an established scorer and a right-handed defenseman.

"I of course can't make decisions about trades," Dionne said, "but I do know we need a 25-goal scorer and a right-handed defenseman. I think there will be a number of good players becoming available in the NHL, and I expect we'll go after them.

"We can't expect Rogie Vachon to carry us like we have in the past," Dionne added, referring to the Kings' goalie. "I feel like we're not too far away from being a really great team, but I also know that everybody else is improving and we need to do something before next season."

Dionne's impressive statistics this campaign helped him win the $10,000 award presented annually by Seagrams, but the final determination was based on a complicated computer comparison measured against a "standard of achievement," with emphasis on consistency, performance under pressure and contribution to victory.

He compiled a season-long efficiency rating of 83.85 to narrowly beat Montreal goaltender Ken Dryden. Dryden had a rating of 82.80 to finish as runnerup for the second consecutive year. Two other Canadiens, last year's winner Guy Lafleur and Steve Shutt, finished third and fourth in this year's computer standings.

Rick MacLeish of Philadelphia was fifth, Colorado's Wilf Paiement sixth and Gil Perreault of Buffalo seventh.

Poly signs five cagers

Pursuing freshmen talent for his 1977-78 Cal Poly Pomona basketball team, head coach Don Hogan has signed five highly talented prep players to national letters of intent.

The five players joining the Broncs are Carl Underwood of Ramona High School in Riverside, Herb Harper of Downey High School, Richard Collins of Channel Islands High in Oxnard, Gerald Robinson from Garey, Ind., and Don DeWitt from Auburn, Ind.

Underwood, who averaged 14.6 points a game in winning second team All-CIF (California Interscholastic Federation) honors, led his team to the CIF 3A finals, losing in the championship game to Corona del Mar in overtime.

"Carl has natural guard talent," said Hogan. "He also has excellent offensive talents. I have seen him play and like what I've seen. Also, some astute basketball people have recommended Carl." He is a 6-2 guard, and plans to major in business management.

Harper meanwhile led his team to the semifinals, only to see his Downey squad also fall victim to Corona del Mar in that round. A 6-4 forward, Harper is described as a hard worker with excellent leaping ability, and good offensive and defensive skills. He was counted on for 16 points and 15 rebounds a game for Downey.

One player whose team successfully went all the way to the CIF 2A championship, is 6-7 forward Collins, another great leaper who will be a strong rebounder. Last season he shot 50 per cent from the floor and scored 13 points and grabbed 11 rebounds a game. He won all-CIF first team honors.

The two players from Indiana, Robinson and DeWitt, are guards who come from highly respected prep programs.

A 5-10 guard Robinson averaged about 18 points a game while playing for Rosevelt High in Gary. He is described as very quick, a good passer and shooter, who can really help the offense from outside.

DeWitt is 6-3, and along with scoring 18 points a game, was known as a steady and aggressive player, while helping DeKalb High of Auburn.

To say that Hogan is "pleased" to have these players is putting it mildly.

"This group completes our recruiting effort for this year," Hogan said. "We set out to get the best freshmen we could get. I think we accomplished that sooner than we expected.

"With five freshmen, we'll try to let them grow with the program. And because they've all been a part of programs that have been strong on the high school level, they'll carry that same kind of winning tradition through four years at Cal Poly."

AL VECCHIO, AREA "G" DIRECTOR for the American Youth Soccer Organization (AYSO) is retiring from his post at the end of this month. His spot will be filled by Rick Baker, current Regional Commissioner for Upland AYSO.

After a successful career that spanned two continents and which was interrupted by World War II, Al "hung 'em up" and began a missionary program to teach soccer to American youngsters.

A resident of Claremont, Al devoted two years as Chief Referee of the then fledgling AYSO program in the Claremont-Glendora Region 3. The third year he became President of Claremont AYSO, a post which he held for three years, before becoming Regional Commissioner of Claremont AYSO. In 1974 Al was voted Area Director for Area "G".

Under his direction and guidance, Claremont AYSO split into regions that now include Pomona, Diamond Bar, Walnut, Upland, Cucamonga, Alta Loma, Etiwanda, Ontario, Montclair, Chino, San Dimas, La Verne, Corona, Norco, and Home Gardens.

KICKIN' AROUND asked Al about his plans as a retiree. Al responded: "I plan to relax, enjoy myself, and take it easy. I have a grandson, Mike Verlich, who is 11 years old . . . maybe I'll coach his team."

Al is completing his soccer circle; he started out as a youth player in his native Italy and will be closing it as a youth coach. He has given freely and asked nothing in return.

Vecchio, AYSO's Area "G" Director, has contributed greatly to the youth of our community and thus leaves a rich man, for "the greatest gift a man possesses is that which he gives away."

PRO SOCCER CAME TO SANTA ANNA BOWL last Saturday night when the California Sunshine debuted against defending American Soccer League champs, the Los Angeles Skyhawks, resulting in an inspiring nip-and-tuck tie-game which two 10-minute overtimes couldn't resolve.

For the Sunshine it was a step up the ladder of prestige to be able to open strongly against the 1976 titlists who jumped to a 1-0 lead on a fine header by Doug McMillan at 34 minutes.

OVER AT THE COLISEUM the Aztecs and the Portland Timbers deadlocked at 1-1 in regular time (the first goal scored on the Aztecs this season) and remained that way after two 15-minute overtimes.

The NASL now uses the "shootout" as a method of breaking tie games wherein five players from each team gets an individual chance to start from 35 yards out with the ball in possession but has to make his attempt on the goal within five seconds of the referee's starting whistle.

On the other end the goalie is free to break from the goalline on the whistle and do whatever he can to thwart the scorer's effort. Under the five-second limit the goalie usually is out past the penalty-kick mark (12 yards out), and the ball-carrier is close to the penalty area when the attempt is made . . . about 18 yards out . . . and that's where the kicker must decide whether he will try to blast or chip or curve around the goalie's charge . . . at which time the goalie has to be very careful of his angle or of being dribbled. In any case the five seconds is a heavy factor whatever is done has to be done like right now. Most carriers only get to touch the ball twice before a hasty shot.

It was Des Backos, the Aztecs' energetic midfielder from South Africa, who managed the winning tie-breaker goal after Goalie Mishalow had spectacularly saved Stewart Schullion's (ex of Tampa Bay) effort. It was left to usually-capable Clyde Best (another ex-Tampan and West Hammer, too) to keep things even but Clyde was a clod this time and his shot sailed over the crossbar and the Aztecs were "in" by 2-1.

It was the Aztecs' third straight NASL win and keeps them one point ahead of second place Dallas in the Southern Division.

Coliseum action Sunday finds Chicago's Sting furnishing the opposition. The Sting are managed by Bill Foulkes, long-time teammate of George Best and Bobby Charlton and Denis Law.

Foulkes was one of the survivors of the Manchester United plane crash at Munich which killed nine members of the famous Matt Busby team.

Pacers need money

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The Indiana Pacers, who recently completed their first season in the National Basketball Association, are for sale, franchise chairman Bill Eason has confirmed.

"There's no sense beating around the bush. The situation is serious," Eason said Wednesday. He is board chairman and majority stockholder of Arena Sports Inc., owner of the Pacers. "Financially, we are on the short end of the stick."

He said the problem was caused by the decision this season to offer limited partnerships. The offer was designed to generate new capital, but Eason said the Securities and Exchange Commission would only approve the offer if owners put up $850,000.

Vikings enjoy role-switching

By JIM McCONNELL
PB Staff Writer

A little of what psychologists call "role reversal" did wonders for Garey High's baseball squad Wednesday.

The Vikings had dropped a one-run decision to Damien on Tuesday as the Spartans' Richard Bustos had outdueled the Vikes' Cregg Handy.

Wednesday, in a makeup game of a contest which had been rained out earlier in the year, the Vikings turned the tables on the host Spartans.

Garey rallied for two runs in the top of the seventh and used a strong relief performance by Handy to hand the Spartans a one-run setback, 6-5.

The result leaves the two squads tied for third in the San Antonio League behind league leader Montclair and second place Pomona. There are three league games remaining for all SAL teams prior to the start of the CIF 3A playoffs.

Garey kept its hopes alive for a spot in those playoffs with the win over the Spartans, but it took a great bit of hurling by Handy and a crucial Damien miscue in the eventful seventh to win it for the Pomona school.

Down 5-4 in that inning, the Vikings were facing Bustos, who had entered the game in relief of starter Mark Schlesinger in the sixth.

Roosevelt Lett got the rally going with a leadoff single, and one out later Fernie Larez duplicated Lett's feat. Bustos then bore down to whiff Art Avila, and Garey's hopes looked dim.

Ruben Rodriguez followed by topping the ball out in front of the plate. Bustos had some difficulty in picking the ball up off the turf, and his hurried throw to first bounced off first sacker Tony Cimino and down the right-field line, allowing both Lett and Larez to score.

Handy, who had come on in the fifth to bail Viking starter Aurelio Coronado out of a jam, was near-perfect in a two and two-third inning stint.

The senior righthander fanned six of the nine men he faced, and allowed only one baserunner, on a walk to Pat Gross in the seventh.

The key play, as things turned out, for Damien was a ball hit by John Rayburn in the second inning. Rayburn's two-out drive up the alley in left-center would have scored Gross easily from first and might have gone for a two-run inside-the-park homer, but instead the ball took a high bounce over the fence.

Thus, the Spartans had only runners at second and third, and neither scored as Dan Marconi ended the inning by grounding out.

Damien also hurt itself by fanning no less than 13 times against Coronado and Handy.

Leading the Viking attack was Larez with two singles and a double and two RBIs.

Broncos stun Hawaii

By PAUL CLICK
PB Correspondent

Coach John Scolinos' Cal Poly Broncos, who entered the contest with a disappointing 11-25 season ledger, stunned the nation's top-rated team, the University of Hawaii, 8-6 Wednesday afternoon at Kellogg Field.

Poly (now 12-25) erased a first-inning deficit of five runs by scoring eight runs over the final five innings to best the Rainbows, who are now 45-11 on the year.

Hawaii, which shares the number-one rating in the country along with Clemson in the latest Collegiate Baseball poll, was held to a single run after threatening to blow the game wide open in the first two innings.

After those first two frames, Poly starter Randy Nelson found his rhythm and shut down the Rainbows' explosive batting attack.

"Our performance was very good today," noted Scolinos. "The guys hung in there tough after falling behind 5-0 in the first inning.

"Nelson was all right after that first inning. He allowed his emotions to get the best of him as he wasn't thinking out there. He was so pumped up that he couldn't pitch right but once he settled down he pitched a masterful game and did a great job."

Nelson went the distance as he began to get the Hawaii batters to hit the ball to his infielders. Cal Poly turned three doubleplays behind Nelson and he allowed only three harmless singles after the disasterous first inning.

Kevin McLean paced the Broncos' comeback with two doubles and three runs batted in. His third-inning two-bagger set up two runs as Poly closed the Rainbows' margin to 5-3. McLean also drove in the go-ahead runs with a double to leftfield in the seventh as Poly took the lead for the first time at 8-6.

Mike Davis gave the Broncs two runs in the third with a single to left to score Rufus Thompson and McLean. Davis scored the third run of the inning on a Jay Johnson base hit.

The Broncos went back to work with the wood in the sixth after the Rainbows had added a run to their 5-3 margin.

Scott Pyle battled Noland Arakawa until Arakawa served him an inside pitch which Pyle promptly pulled into the leftfield corner for a double. Pyle came around to score to chop the Rainbow lead to 6-4 before Poly went ahead to stay with four runs in the seventh.

"We swung the bat today and we were aggressive in the field," commented Scolinos. "Our guys were in there swinging the bats compared to the other day when we were standing at the plate like the Statue of Liberty.

"Let's face it, when you're swinging at the ball, you've got a chance to hit it. You can't hit the ball unless you take your cuts at the plate!"

Cal Poly received at least one hit from every man in the lineup except Bob Minor. The Broncos racked up 11 of their 12 hits after the first three innings.

Paul Mize was Hawaii's top hitter with three hits in the contest.

The Broncos, who have now knocked off three top-ranked teams this year in UC Riverside, CS Fullerton and Hawaii, will go against CS Los Angeles Friday at the CSLA diamond. That game will start at 2:30 p.m.

Alberto Davila fights Alcivar

LOS ANGELES — After nearly a two-year absence from the Olympic Auditorium, Pomona's Alberto Davila returns to action tonight to fight Ecuador's Carlos Alcivar.

Davila is coming off two very impressive wins in 1976 over world contenders Lupe Pintor (fourth) and Cubanito Hernandez (eighth). Oddly enough, Davila who lopsidedly beat Pintor, is ranked sixth.

Bennie Georgio will be making his managerial debut working with Davila and hopes it will only be several months at the most before Davila gets a crack at the title.

"I'd sign to have Davila fight either Zarate or Zamora," says Georgino of the two champions. "I don't care how hard they punch, they've never met a guy who moves and boxes like Davila."

First, however, Davila is verbally committed to face No. 10 contender Frankie Duarte this summer at the Olympic if he gets past Alcivar tonight.

"Both Georgino and Cabrerra (John) have agreed to fight within two months," says matchmaker Don Chargin. "This fight has been in the talking stages for two years. I'd like to make it for 12 rounds with the winner to get a title shot.

"Right now, though, all we can do is speculate. We have to see what happens next week against Alcivar. Duarte did his past two weeks ago by

Q. "WHAT IS A NAUTICAL MILE?"

DOUGLAS SOUSA
TAUNTON, MA

A. DISTANCES ON THE SEA ARE MEASURED IN NAUTICAL MILES. THE INTERNATIONAL NAUTICAL MILE IS 6,076.1 FEET LONG, OR ABOUT 1.15 LAND MILES.

You probably know that, in the U.S. system of measurement, there are 5,280 feet in a land, or statute, mile.

But distances on the sea are measured in nautical, or sea, miles.

The international nautical mile used in the United States and other countries is 6,076.1 feet long. This makes the nautical mile equal to about 1.15 land miles.

A nautical mile equals 1/60 of one degree of the distance around the earth.

The mile was first used by the ancient Romans. It was about 5,000 feet long and contained 1,000 paces, or double steps.

In the 1500s, Englishmen measured distances in 660-foot furlongs, so Queen Elizabeth I made the mile 8 furlongs. Thus the land mile became 5,280 feet long.

Countries using the metric system use kilometers to measure distances. A kilometer equals 3,280.8 feet, or about 5/8 of a land mile.

Before too many years we, too, will be using the metric system!

GOSH
Chalk Talk from
Griswold's Old Schoolhouse

The "reconstruction" has begun at Griswold's! Bulldozers and heavy trucks are already beginning to seem like part of the landscape. Crews are frantically getting ready to have our new parking areas ready for Mother's Day; in the meantime there's plenty of parking in the north lots. So far construction problems are minor: one water line (that no one knew existed!) broken and lines for the electric sign out front torn up — fortunately not all at the same time!

Speaking of Mother's Day, here are some surefire "Mother pleasers", all available right here under one roof! Very feminine fashions for the most discriminating of mothers at UNCLE OTTO'S . . . prettily wrapped gift assortments at COOK'S NOOK . . . Natural cosmetics, soaps from round the world or a fluffy bath sheet from DECOR-8 . . . YAG simulated diamonds and 14 carat jewelry on sale at A 'TOUCH OF CLASS . . . Beautiful healthy plants at the PATIO and handthrown pots for them in the CLAY GALLERY . . . Is Mom a collector? Try the ANNEX, CHER'S HAUS OF IMPORTS, LOB SANG OF TIBET, ORIENT HOUSE or NIKOSAN IMPORTS for fine collectibles and one-of-a-kinds.

Last weekend was our first crack at the Art Fair under construction. Although a little hectic at first, all will be ironed out by this weekend. It will continue each week — wherever there's space, you'll find some art! We're holding Art Fairs at our Redlands and Fullerton properties now. We hope the 3 locations will provide more fun and more convenience, too.

Celebrate Cinco de Mayo with us this Sunday — we'll have a 7-piece mariachi band on the Patio, 1:30-4:30. "Don" a sombrero and come over for some singing and dancing!

Scripps to offer dance program

SUSAN BACKLINIE, who became famous as the nude swimmer attacked by the shark in "Jaws," suffers another untimely death from attacks by maddened wolves in the Film Ventures International science fiction thriller, "Day of the Animals."

Scripps College senior Carol Corbus will present "Imprints," an original dance piece, in Balch Auditorium at 8 p.m. Sunday. Admission is free.

The entire performance is student-produced, the costumes and music being created by art and music students. A lecture/demonstration of improvisational dance, part of Miss Corbus senior theses in dance, is also included in the program.

Miss Corbus, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Josephus Corbus of Glenview, Ill., has studied dance extensively in her four years at Scripps and intends to pursue dance and movement therapy after graduation.

Gun show set at fairgrounds

Don Bullock's California Gun & Collector's Show will be held at the Los Angeles County Fairgrounds from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. May 7 and 8. Admission is $1.75 general, 75 cents for children.

The show will be held in Building 3-A near the main gate at White and McKinley avenues.

On exhibit will be a wide variety of rare and valuable weapons, most manufactured in the United States and dating back as far as the Revolutionary War. Many of the guns, however, were made and in use before World War I in Great Britain, Germany, France and Italy.

The majority of the firearms are military in nature, although those bearing the names Winchester, Colt and Smith & Wesson were carried by lawmen in the early days of the country, and by all Wells Fargo drivers and the men who rode "shotgun" on the express and passenger stagecoaches as they traveled the young nation coast-to-coast and back.

In addition to guns, the show will feature swords, hunting knives, daggers, antique bronzes, coins, military decorations, bayonets, uniforms, and an array of American Indian jewelry.

The latter is from the private collection of Bullock and his wife, Alicia. Many of the pieces must be categorized as collector's items — so beautiful and unusual that they will undoubtedly end up in a private collection or on display in a museum.

TROUBLE IN PARADISE — The Snake, played by Duane Thomas, tempts Adam and Eve (Jeanne and Mark Shipley) with an apple in "The Apple Tree" at Gallery Theater, Ontario. The musical comedy opens at the theater, C Street and Lemon Avenue, at 8 p.m. Friday, to play at that hour Fridays and Saturdays for several weekends. Reservations can be made at 982-5357.

MONTGOMERY WARD VISIT THE OPTICAL DEPARTMENT

There's more to soft contacts than meets the eye.

You can tell just by looking at a soft contact lens that it is designed to be comfortable on the delicate surface of the eye. It's flexible and soft, just as its name implies.

But the difference between regular contacts and soft contact lenses goes even deeper than that. Soft contacts actually absorb fluid to become even softer and more comfortable while you're wearing them.

Chances are the Optical Department at Wards can fit you with a pair of soft contacts. Wards has the latest in fitting equipment and contact lenses including bifocal contacts.

So, if you're thinking about contacts, think about the Optical Department at Montgomery Ward.

Bottled water firms don't face drought

LOS ANGELES (AP) — There is no drought in Southern California's bottled water industry.

If anything, more people are willing to pay for bottled water to quench their thirst as more sections of the drought-stricken state impose mandatory water rationing, industry officials say.

Currently 43 areas of California serving 4.5 million persons have rationed water, and Los Angeles may impose stringent controls on its three million residents next month.

"We have definitely had an increase in sales, although it is hard to segregate the factors that caused it," Clem Wachner, division manager of Sparkletts Bottled Water Corp. in Los Angeles, said in an interview.

"But one thing is certain. We can take care of much more business than we have even now, because our plants are not being used at full capacity."

The biggest increase in sales has come in Northern California, where Sparkletts is distributed by Alhambra National Water Co. of San Francisco, Wachner said.

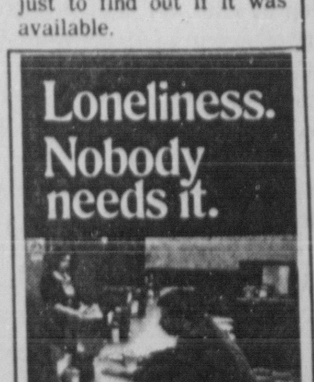

He said that when rationing was imposed in the San Francisco Bay Area in March, sales in Marin County soared 30 per cent.

In Southern California — where the effects of the drought have been felt less keenly and water rationing has not yet been imposed — the increase has been less significant, Wachner said. However, he said he did not have figures available pinpointing how much of the increase was due to the drought, and how much to the warm weather.

Wachner added that the drought had not hurt the company's supply of water from wells at its five bottling plants in Los Angeles, San Diego and Las Vegas.

"We really don't know what to expect," Wachner said. "But so far we haven't noticed any significant drop in the water table" at the company's wells.

Bill Spencer, division manager for Arrowhead Water Co., said his company had also had an increase in the number of persons calling to begin taking bottled water — or just to find out if it was available.
